British Film Music and Film Musicals K. Donnelly,2007-08-16 In the first book length consideration of the topic for sixty years Kevin Donnelly examines the importance of music in British film concentrating both on musical scores such as William Walton s score for Henry V 1944 and Malcolm Arnold s music for The Bridge on the River Kwai 1957 and on the phenomenon of the British film musical Variety International Film Guide ,1993

British Women Film Directors in the New Millennium Stella Hockenhull,2017-04-27 This book focuses on the output of women film directors in the period post Millennium when the number of female directors working within the film industry rose substantially Despite the fact that nationally and internationally women film directors are underrepresented within the industry there is a wealth of talent currently working in Britain During the early part of the 2000s the UKFC instigated policies and strategies for gender equality and since then the British Film Institute has continued to encourage diversity British Women Directors in the New Millennium therefore examines the production distribution and exhibition of female directors work in light of policy The book is divided into two sections part one includes a historical background of women directors working in the twentieth century before discussing the various diversity funding opportunities available since 2000 The second part of the book examines the innovation creativity and resourcefulness of British female film directors as well as the considerable variety of films that they produce selecting specific examples for analysis in the process Wildlife Films Derek Bousé,2011-11-29 If as many argue movies and television have become Western culture s premier storytelling media so too have they become for most members of society the primary source of encounters with the natural world particularly wild animals The television fare offered nightly by national and cable networks such as PBS and the Discovery Channel provides millions of viewers with their only experience of the wilderness and its inhabitants The very films that so many viewers take as accurate portrayals of wildlife however have evolved primarily as a form of entertainment following the established codes and conventions of narrative exposition The result has been not the representation of nature but its wholesale reconstruction and reconfiguration according to film and television conventions audience expectations and the demands of competition in the media marketplace Wildlife Films traces the genealogy of the nature film from its origins as the animal locomotion studies that mark the very beginnings of motion pictures themselves to the founding of the Animal Planet cable channel that boasts all animals all the time The narrative and thematic elements that unite wildlife films as a genre have their roots not in the documentary film tradition but in the older traditions of oral and written animal fables as reflections of human society Derek Bous contends that classic wildlife films often portray animal protagonists living in families modeled on an ideal of the human nuclear family and working in communities that resemble an ideal of bucolic human society In these stories presented as documentaries animals are motivated by human emotions and conduct relationships according to human customs This imposition of culturally satisfying narrative patterns upon the lives of animals has not only led to the misrepresentation of the natural world it has promoted the notion that our values our moral vision our models of society and family structure derive from nature rather than being cultural formations
