Enough with Famines in Ethiopia Fasil G. Kiros, 2005 When in 2002 03 Ethiopia was ushered into the twenty first century by the threat of famine of unprecedented proportion it stirred a deeply felt reaction to call on policy makers and ordinary citizens to raise arms against a scourge which has afflicted their country throughout its long history The announcement of the threat of famine amounted to a virtual acknowledgement that the country's past national development goal has been little more than a pipe dream For no claim of development can be made in the face of the prospect of mass starvation It is proposed that a new start is needed in Ethiopia in the pursuit of the goal of lasting food security and the prevention of recurrent famine one which can at times put to question the conventional development wisdom and calls for a commitment to certain key principles which can help prevent the repetition of past failures while at the same time providing the foundation for future progress It is argued that lasting food security can only be achieved by means of an interactive development process involving the sustainable development of agriculture and an increasingly diversified national economy In concluding the main questions which may likely concern many people are addressed directly Wherefrom are the investment resources to be obtained and where the capacities are to be summoned to promote the scale and tempo of the development envisaged Examples are offered of the types of measures which could be considered in response to the future development challenges Ultimately both the ends of development and the means by which they might be attained must derive impetus from the cravings and drive for accomplishment of ordinary people acting individually or collectively in the pursuit of their common interests The primary instrument for unleashing this potential belongs to the political realm

International Migration and Global Justice Satvinder Juss, 2016-04-22 How should international law approach the critical issue of movement of peoples in the 21st century This book presents a radical reappraisal of this controversial problem Challenging present day ideas of restrictions on freedom of movement and the international structure that controls entry to states it argues for a new blueprint for international migration policy that eliminates waste aids both developing and developed societies and brings attendant benefits to voluntary migrants and involuntary refugees alike In a world of increasing disorder it is suggested that current policy only adds to international instability and threatens the interests of a functional global community

Coming Home? Lynell D. Long, Ellen Oxfeld, 2017-06-16 Few things weigh on the human spirit more heavily than a sense of place the lands we live in and return to have a profound ability to shape our notions of home and homeland not to mention our own identities The pull of the familiar and the desire to begin anew are conflicting impulses for the nearly 180 million people who live outside their countries of origin often with the expectation of returning home Of 30 million people who immigrated to the United States alone between 1900 and 1980 10 million are believed to have returned to their homelands While migration flows occur in both directions surprisingly few studies of transnationalism global migration or diaspora address return experiences Undertaking a comparative analysis of how coming home affects individuals and their communities in a myriad cultural and geographic settings the contributors to this volume seek to understand the unique return migration experiences of refugees migrants and various others as they confront the social pressures and a sense of displacement that accompany their journeys The returns depicted in Coming Home range from temporary visits to permanent repatriation from voluntary to coerced movements and from those occurring after a few years of exile to those after several decades away The geographic sites include the Balkans Barbados China Eritrea Ethiopia Germany Nicaragua the Philippines Rwanda and Vietnam Several studies portray the experiences of returning refugees who earlier fled war and violence while others focus on economic or labor migrants As the essays show connections between permanent returnees and home communities are contentious and complex On the one hand issues of land title property rights political orientation and religious and cultural beliefs and practices create grounds for clashes between returnees and their home communities but on the other returnees bring with them a unique ability to transform local practices and provide new resources

Understanding Impoverishment Chris McDowell,1996 Infrastructure development projects are set to continue into the next century as developing country governments seek to manage population growth urbanization and industrialization The contributions in this volume raise many questions about development and progress in the late twentieth century What is revealed are the enormous problems and disastrous affects which continue to accompany displacement operations in many countries which raise the ever more urgent question of whether the benefits of infrastructure development justify or outweigh the pain of the radical disruption of peoples lives exacerbated by the fact that with some notable exceptions there has been a lack of official recognition on the part of governments and international agencies that development induced displacement is a problem at all This important volume addresses the issues and shows just how serious the situation is
