Chapter 1 – Managing Sport

1 What are the three segments within the sport business industry? Be able describe each.

(p. 13): Public, non-profit, and commercial

Public Sector: Government-based units, agencies, parks, and recreation departments. That is, entities created by the people/ for the people.

Non-Profit Sector: Voluntary organizations whose main purpose is not to make a profit but rather to address a social cause, a special interest, and the needs of members. In many cases, organizations that focus on educational or cultural, religious, professional, or public service operate as non-profit organizations. Organizations, including national sports associations, local sports clubs, and governing bodies.

Commercial Sector: Organizations whose primary objective is to generate revenue/ profit; includes professional sport franchises, sports media, sporting goods manufacturers, event firms, etc.

1 What are the purpose of public/nonprofit/commercial sector organizations? (p. 14):

Public sector: To provide sport services/ facilities/programs for the public good; ensure access, inclusion, and policy oversight. Like parks, recreation, safety, and equity.

Non-Profit Sector: To serve a social cause or member interests rather than generate a profit, like sport development, governance, member benefits, community building, and youth development.

Commercial Sector: To generate revenue and profit. To provide sport or sport-related products or services; to serve consumers, often in competitive markets.

1 What are the four unique aspects that justify sport management as a distinct area of professional preparation? Be able to briefly explain each of the areas. (p. 15): Sport marketing, Sport enterprise financial structure, Industry career path, Sport as a social institution.

These are (based on Pedersen/Thibault) the things that make sport management different from “just general management.” The four are:

a. Sport marketing – The nature of the sport product/service is unique (e.g., game outcomes are uncertain, schedules are fixed, production and consumption are simultaneous, perishability).

b. Sport enterprise financial structures – Many sport organizations have mixed sources of revenue (ticket sales, media rights, sponsorship, public/private funding); there are often nontraditional financial constraints.

c. Industry career path – The career paths in sport often require connections, experience (volunteer or field experience), movement across sectors, etc.; they may differ from more “typical” corporate or nonprofit careers.

d. Sport as a social institution – Sport plays roles beyond business: identity, community, culture, politics, social norms, health, education, etc.; its social impact is large and part of how management must consider
