Albini, 1981 Spot Fire Distance from Isolated Sources Frank A. Albini, 1981 This note extends a predictive model for estimating spot fire distance from burning trees Albini Frank A 1979 Spot fire distance from burning trees a predictive model USDA For Serv Gen Tech Rep INT 56 73 p Intermt For and Range Exp Stn Ogden Utah A formula is given for the maximum firebrand lofting height by continuous flames such as from burning piles jackpots of woody fuel and so forth This height may be used directly in the algorithm detailed in the earlier work Also formulas and graphs are given for estimating maximum spot fire distance when the terrain downwind of the source of firebrands is covered by vegetation of low height bare ground or water rather than forest This extension is implemented by establishing an effective or minimum vegetation height to be used in the formulas given in the earlier work The effective vegetation cover height so derived depends on the firebrand initial height USDA Forest Service General Technical Report INT. ,1979 Spotting Distance from Wind-driven Surface Fires Carolyn H. Chase, 1984 Measuring Cross Sections Using a Sag Tape Gary A. Ray, 1979 Common Shrubs of Chaparral and Associated Ecosystems of Southern California C. Chase, 1989 This is the third publication describing the BEHAVE system of computer programs for predicting behavior of wildland fires This publication adds the following predictive capabilities distance firebrands are lofted ahead of a wind driven surface fire probabilities of firebrands igniting spot fires scorch height of trees and percentage of tree mortality The system includes a separate module for graphing moisture content of fine dead fuels Basic assumptions limitations and application of the prediction models are discussed Previous publications in the BEHAVE series are BEHAVE fire behavior prediction and fuel modeling system FUEL subsystem Burgan and Rothermel 1984 and BEHAVE fire behavior prediction and fuel modeling system BURN subsystem Part 1 Andrews 1986 General Technical Report INT. ,1992 Fire Science Francisco Castro Rego, Penelope Morgan, Paulo Fernandes, Chad Hoffman, 2021-09-24 This textbook provides students and academics with a conceptual understanding of fire behavior and fire effects on people and ecosystems to support effective integrated fire management Through case studies interactive spreadsheets programmed with equations and graphics and clear explanations the book provides undergraduate graduate and professional readers with a straightforward learning path The authors draw from years of experience in successfully teaching fundamental concepts and applications synthesizing cutting edge science and applying lessons learned from fire practitioners We discuss fire as part of environmental and human health Our process based comprehensive and quantitative approach encompasses combustion and heat transfer and fire effects on people plants soils and animals in forest grassland and woodland ecosystems from around the Earth Case studies and examples link fundamental concepts to local landscape and global fire implications including social ecological systems Globally fire science and integrated fire management have made major strides in the last few decades Society faces numerous fire related challenges including the increasing occurrence of large fires that threaten people and property smoke that poses a health hazard and lengthening fire seasons worldwide Fires are useful to suppress fires conserve wildlife and habitat enhance livestock grazing manage fuels and in ecological restoration Understanding fire science is critical to forecasting the implication of global change for fires and their effects Increasing the positive effects of fire fuels reduction enhanced habitat for many plants and animals ecosystem services increased while reducing the negative impacts of fires loss of human lives smoke and carbon emissions that threaten health etc is part of making fires good servants rather than bad masters
