

A detailed illustration of a medieval sailing ship, likely a carrack or galleon, with a large, light-colored sail. The ship is shown from a side-on perspective, sailing on a blue sea with white-capped waves. On the deck, a group of people in period clothing are visible. Some are wearing red robes, while others are in blue. They appear to be engaged in various activities, possibly related to the ship's operation or a voyage. The ship's mast and rigging are visible, and the overall scene suggests a historical maritime journey.

Christian pilgrimage in the twelve hundred years between the conversion of Emperor Constantine and the beginnings of the Protestant Reformation As well as exploring this multi faceted activity it considers both the geography of pilgrimage and its significant cultural legacy

Denmark and the Crusades, 1400-1650 Janus Møller Jensen, 2007-04-30 This first full length study of the role of crusading in late medieval and early modern Denmark from about 1400 to 1650 offers new perspectives to international crusade studies The first part of the book proves that crusading had a tremendous impact on political and religious life in Scandinavia all through the Middle Ages Danish kings argued in the fifteenth century that they had their own northern crusade frontier which stretched across Scandinavia from Russia in the east well into the North Atlantic and Greenland in the west A series of expeditions in the North Atlantic were considered to be crusades aimed at reconquering Greenland as a stepping stone towards India and the realm of Prester John which was argued to be originally Danish adding a much neglected corner to the expansion of Christendom in this period The second part shows that the impact of crusading continued long after the Reformation ostensibly should have put an end to its viability within Protestant Denmark

The Military Orders Volume IV Judi Upton-Ward, 2016-09-17 In the last two decades there has been an explosion of scholarly interest in the Military Orders With a history stretching from the early twelfth century to the present day they were among the richest and most powerful orders of the church in medieval Europe They founded their own states in Prussia and on the Mediterranean islands of Rhodes and Malta They are of concern to historians of the Church art and architecture government agriculture estate management banking medicine and warfare and of the expansion of Europe overseas The conferences on their history which have been organized in London every four years have attracted leading scholars from all over the world The present volume records the proceedings of the Fourth Conference in 2005 and is essential reading for those interested in the progress of research on these extraordinary institutions The twenty seven papers published here represent a selection of those delivered at the conference Architecture archaeology and the part which the orders played in Europe are well represented along with work on northern and eastern Europe Four papers deal specifically with military or naval matters while another four deal with the spiritual life of the brothers and sisters Family relationships represent a growing field of interest The majority of the papers focus on the Hospitallers but the volume includes studies on the Templars and the Teutonic Order as well as the Portuguese military orders

The Churches of the Crusader Kingdom of Jerusalem: Volume 3, The City of Jerusalem Denys Pringle, 1993 This is the third in a series of four volumes that are intended to present a complete Corpus of all the church buildings of both the Western and the Oriental rites built rebuilt or simply in use in the Crusader Kingdom of Jerusalem between the capture of Jerusalem by the First Crusade in 1099 and the loss of Acre in 1291 This volume deals exclusively with Jerusalem the capital of the Kingdom from 1099 to 1187 leaving the churches of Acre and Tyre to be covered in the fourth and final volume The Corpus will be an indispensable work of reference to all those concerned with the medieval topography and archaeology of the Holy Land with the history of the

Wandering Women and Holy Matrons Leigh Ann Craig, 2009 This book explores women's experiences of pilgrimage in Latin Christendom between 1300 and 1500 C E Later medieval authors harbored grave doubts about women's mobility literary images of mobile women commonly accused them of lust pride greed and deceit Yet real women commonly engaged in pilgrimage in a variety of forms both physical and spiritual voluntary and compulsory and to locations nearby and distant Acting within both practical and social constraints such women helped to construct more positive interpretations of their desire to travel and of their experiences as pilgrims Regardless of how their travel was interpreted those women who succeeded in becoming pilgrims offer us a rare glimpse of ordinary women taking on extraordinary religious and social authority

Travel and Translation in the Early Modern Period, 2006-01-01 The relationship between travel and translation might seem obvious at first but to study it in earnest is to discover that it is at once intriguing and elusive Of course travelers translate in order to make sense of their new surroundings sometimes they must translate in order to put food on the table The relationship between these two human compulsions however goes much deeper than this What gets translated it seems is not merely the written or the spoken word but the very identity of the traveler These seventeen essays which treat not only such well known figures as Martin Luther Erasmus Shakespeare and Milton but also such lesser known figures as Konrad Gremberg Leo Africanus and Garcilaso de la Vega constitute the first survey of how this relationship manifests itself in the early modern period As such it should be of interest both to scholars who are studying theories of translation and to those who are studying hodoeporics or travel and the literature of travel
