Cohen, Jerald Greenberg, 2013-11-11 From July 16 through July 21 1984 a group of American and

West German scholars met in Marburg West Germany to discuss their common work on the topic of justice in social relations. For over 30 hours they presented papers, raised questions about each other's work, and in so doing plotted a course for future research and theory building on this topic. The participants were asked to present work that represented their most recent state of the science contributions in the area. The contributions to this volume represent refined versions of those presentations, papers that have been improved by the authors' consideration of the comments and reactions of their colleagues. The result, we believe, is a work that represents the cutting edge of scholarly inquiry into the important matter of justice in social relations. To give the participants the freedom to present their ideas in the most appropriate way, we, the conference organizers and the editors of this volume, gave them complete control over the form and substance of their presentations. The resulting diversity is reflected in this book, where the reader will find critical integrative reviews of the literature, reports of research investigations, and statements of theoretical positions. The chapters are organized with respect to the common themes that emerged in the way the authors addressed the issues of justice in social relations. Each of these themes—conflict and power, theoretical perspectives, norms, and applications—is represented by a part of this book. Values, Achievement, and Justice Norman T. Feather, 2005-12-02. When we say that a person deserves a positive or negative outcome, we are making a judgment that is influenced by a number of variables. We would certainly take into account whether the person was responsible for the outcome or whether the outcome could be attributed to other sources. We would also consider whether the actions that led to the positive or negative outcome were actions that we would value or actions that would meet with our disapproval. We might also be influenced by the person's own positive or negative characteristics, by our knowledge of what kinds of groups or social categories the person belonged to, and by whether we like or dislike the person. Information about these different variables has to be considered and integrated in some way, and our judgment of deservingness follows that psychological process, a process that involves the cognitive-affective system. Values, Achievements, and Justice is about deservingness and about the variables that affect the judgments we make. I use the term deservingness, although I could equally have referred to deservedness or desert. The terms are all virtually equivalent in meaning, although dictionaries may separate them by using fine distinctions. I assume that the sorts of variables I have just described will affect our judgments of deservingness, and I further assume that a judgment of deservingness is most likely to occur when these variables fit together in a consistent, harmonious, and balanced way.
