Steroid Disorders Maria I. New,Oksana Lekarev,Denesy Mancenido,Alan Parsa,Tony Yuen,2013-08-22 Congenital adrenal hyperplasia CAH refers to a group of autosomal recessive genetic disorders that arise from defective steroidogenesis The 21 hydroxylase deficiency 21OHD is the most common form of CAH accounting for more than 90% of cases It is the most common disorder of sexual development DSD in females The gene is encoded by CYP21A2 which is located on the short arm of chromosome 6 6p21.3 The activity of the enzyme 21 hydroxylase encoded by the CYP21A2 gene is deficient leading to an accumulation of 17 hydroxyprogesterone 17 OHP and subsequent elevation of androgens The three forms of 21OHD are the salt wasting form simple virilizing form and non classical form The first two forms are classical forms of the disease where the hallmark finding is ambiguity of the genitalia in affected female newborns Patients with the non classical form have normal genitalia yet may present with signs of early sexual development and other symptoms of hyperandrogenemia such as short stature hirsutism acne and impaired fertility Hormonal testing is important in making the diagnosis of 21 hydroxylase deficiency yet genetic testing is crucial to secure the diagnosis More than 100 mutations have been identified caused by gene conversions large scale gene deletions and de novo mutations and novel mutations are continuously being identified

Genotype phenotype non concordance is observed in a significant number of patients Genetic Steroid Disorders Jonathan F. Russell,Jenise C. Wong,Melvin M. Grumbach,2013-08-22 Aromatase is a cytochrome P450 enzyme that catalyzes a critical step in the conversion of androgens C19 steroids to estrogens C18 steroids Mutations in the aromatase gene CYP19A1 can result in a lack of aromatase activity and as a consequence impairment in estrogen biosynthesis The functional consequences of this deficiency begin in utero owing to the inability of the placenta to convert androgens to estrogens This disorder is termed aromatase deficiency AD Upon the initial identification of patients with AD certain clinical findings such as virilization of the pregnant mother and 46 XX fetus were easily understood based on the known effects of placental aromatase on the conversion of C19 androgens and androgen precursors to estrogens However the discovery that the lack of estrogens in both females and males with AD leads to the absence of a pubertal growth spurt delayed bone age delayed epiphyseal fusion and decreased accrual of bone mass in the male not only in the female has transformed our understanding of the role of estrogen on the male skeleton It is now established that in both females and males estrogen induces the pubertal growth spurt and mediates epiphyseal fusion In this chapter we summarize the clinical characteristics pathophysiology differential diagnosis and treatment of human AD The implications of AD for the clinical use of aromatase inhibitors are reviewed Genetic Steroid Disorders Richard J. Auchus,2013-08-22 Steroid 17 hydroxylase 17 20 lyase cytochrome P450c17 CYP17A1 occupies a critical position in the pathways of human steroidogenesis regulating the classes of steroid hormones produced by cells of the adrenal glands and gonads CYP17A1 catalyzes two major reactions the 17 hydroxylase and 17 20 lyase reactions Mutations that compromise all CYP17A1 activities cause combined 17 hydroxylase 17 20 lyase deficiency which presents as hypertension hypokalemia and sexual infantilism A few mutations selectively impair 17 20 lyase activity and some mutations in cofactor proteins cytochrome P450 oxidoreductase and cytochrome b5 also selectively disrupt 17 20 lyase activity This chapter reviews the genetics clinical presentation management and history of these disorders

Genetic Steroid Disorders Yves Morel, Florence Roucher, Ingrid Plotton, Jacques Simard, Mauricio Coll, 2013-08-22 The transformation of 5 3 hydroxysteroids into the corresponding 4 3 keto steroids is an essential step for the biosynthesis of all classes of active steroids progesterone mineralocorticoids glucocorticoids androgens and estrogens These steroid hormones play a crucial role in the differentiation development growth and physiological function of most human tissues The 3 HSD deficiency OMIM 201810 transmitted in an autosomic recessive disorder is characterized by varying degrees of salt wasting in genetic males fetal testicular 3 HSD deficiency causes an undervirilized male genitalia male pseudohermaphroditism females exhibit either normal sexual differentiation or mild virilization

Genetic Steroid Disorders Karen Lin-Su, Oksana Lekarev, Maria I. New, 2013-08-22 Many patients with congenital adrenal hyperplasia CAH do not reach a final adult height within their parentally determined target height range Our group has reported the effect of growth hormone GH alone or in combination with luteinizing hormone releasing hormone analog LHRHa on final adult height in 34 patients with CAH Final adult height was significantly higher than baseline predicted height in both males 172 0 4 8 cm versus 162 8 7 7 cm P

Genetic Steroid Disorders Richard C. Rink, Benjamin Whittam, 2013-08-22 Surgical treatment of congenital adrenal hyperplasia has undergone dramatic evolution over the past 30 years This chapter will explore current reconstructive techniques and historic as well as current surgical outcomes A brief description of surgical technique and its evolution will be described followed by an analysis of surgical outcomes The chapter will conclude with a discussion regarding current controversies regarding timing and technique of surgical correction
