

Diamondback Terrapines of Tampa Bay

The diamondback terrapin (Malaclemys terrapin) is the only turtle in the world that is entirely restricted to freshwater water and can be found in Florida's extensive estuarine, mangrove and sub-marine habitats. Tampa Bay is the largest open water estuary in Florida. These habitats are often described as being "where fresh meets the sea" (meeting of fresh and salt water). Although terrapins occur in 10 ways along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts, the majority of Florida represents approximately 20% of their entire range. Florida terrapin populations and habitats are critical to the conservation of the entire species.

Diamondback terrapins play a significant role in the food chain. As predators, they help to control populations of prey items, such as small wet slugs, insect communities and small species of snails. Terrapins and their eggs are known to be used by many predators, including, ducks, herons, fish, otters, crabs, laughing gulls, and ghost crabs.

Despite the importance of Florida to diamondback terrapin heritage, little is known concerning this species over long stretches of Florida coastline. Survival and eggs of diamondback terrapins are unknown to many Floridians. Without public awareness and support, there is little hope for this flagship species for coastal conservation.

For more information, please visit the website of the Diamondback Terrapin Working Group (www.dtwg.org)

Threats and Conservation Actions

Diamondback terrapins were once common in freshwater ecosystems along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts, but have suffered from a long history of habitat exploitation. Current major threats to this species in Florida include:

Loss of nesting habitat. Coastal development decreases available nesting habitat and further fragments populations. Development and protection of these sites by governmental agencies and private conservation groups would greatly benefit terrapin conservation efforts. Encroachment of ditches to prevent road/property damage also limits access to nesting habitat. In some areas, control efforts may be warranted, identifying ways to provide access to terrapin nesting sites is recommended.

Predation. Diamondback terrapin eggs and adults are an important food source for many species of wildlife. Many introduced predators, such as herons, cause considerable damage to terrapin populations at nesting sites. In some cases, control efforts may be warranted.

Accidental drowning in crab pots. Drowning due to Spanish in crab pots is the greatest threat to terrapins throughout their range. Research in Florida waters has shown that the use of simple, unimproved Spanish crab traps results in 75-95% mortality by 75-95%. Regulatory change requiring 80% or commercial and recreational crab pots used in Florida waters would be the greatest immediate conservation action that could be implemented by the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission. In addition, increased or better trap control to capture wildlife. Support of baited crab pot removal programs and participation in such efforts will save terrapins and other species.

Several other anthropogenic factors contribute with automobiles, boat strikes, invasive species, pollution, oil spills, and global climate change are also known to affect terrapins. While each threat alone is of concern, there is an even greater concern regarding their ability to work in negative synergy. It should be known, however, that each of these conservation challenges comes along with a conservation opportunity. It's what we do with that opportunity that can make a difference.

Laws and Regulations Pertaining to Diamondback Terrapins in Florida

Although not a state listed species, numerous provisions have documented that diamondback terrapins are protected as a listed species. Terrapins are designated as such threatened by the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN Red List) and The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission limits the possession of terrapins and prohibits their sale.

Where to See Diamondback Terrapins in the Tampa Bay Region

Although you might encounter a diamondback terrapin in many freshwater water habitats throughout the Tampa Bay region, they are a very sensitive and elusive species. To see a terrapin up close, you might consider visiting one of the following facilities:
