Librarians In Use Of Internet By University Libraries In The South-South Zone, Nigeria.

Stephen Osahon Uwaifo

Abstract: - Purpose- The paper seeks to investigate the use of internet by librarians in university libraries in the South-South zone of Nigeria. Design/Methodology/Approach- The paper uses a survey research approach to carry out this investigation. Findings- The investigation reveals that the librarians make optimal use of a few of the numerous information resources on the internet. The librarians' level of internet use skills is only moderate although majority of them derive several benefits from the internet. However, several factors such as inadequate funds, poor electric power supply, inadequate localized software etc militate against their effective use of the internet. Practical implication- Generally, librarians, university authorities, system, administrators and ICT policy formulators will find this paper useful because it enlightens them about the fact that only a scanty use is made of the numerous internet information resources available and the librarians' level of skills for internet use is moderate. Even though the internet is beneficial to the librarians, several factors impede its effective use. Originality- The study offers new insights in the area of internet use by librarians in Nigerian universities. Because the study revealed that, though information professionals, librarians make scanty use of the numerous internet sources, coupled with their moderate skill in internet use, means that, it differs from other studies.

Key words: - Use, Internet, Librarians, University, Libraries, Nigeria.

Introduction

The imperativeness of information to humans across the world cannot be over-emphasized. It is one thing for information to be available and another for people to have quick and easy access to them. The universal technology that facilitates such access is the internet. The internet can simply be defined as the network of networks of computers. It is therefore an international network of information networks. The internet is a self-governing global network that joins together millions of individuals, commercial and nonprofit organizations. It is changing our lives in remarkable ways, becoming more central to librarians and libraries with each passing year. It widens its hold on librarians' everyday routines-from delivering documents and purchasing books to searching database as well as delivering distance education [1] It is one thing for the internet to be regarded as very vital to human existence, and another to ask if people (especially librarians) make optimal use of the technology especially in this age of globalization. This paper therefore investigates the use of internet by librarians in university libraries in the South-South zone of Nigeria.

Review of Related Literature

A wide range of literature abounds about the internet and its use. Information is a sine-qua-non for every form of development-academically, socially, economically, politically, religiously, etc. For enterprises, communities and individuals to successfully participate in the global economic activities, ICTs gradually become more crucial [2]. The internet is an important modern technology hence, it is universally accepted and used. The e-mail, newsgroup, search engines, telemedicine, teleconferencing, etc are some of the wide range of facilities and services on the internet[3]. These facilities and services are really essential to academics in their bid to access and manage information, geared towards communicating knowledge to people. [4]. The importance of internet use skills cannot be over-emphasized. This is because for a user to be effective in the use of ICTs generally, he requires basic skills. Lack of technological skills therefore impedes learning outcomes [5]. Acquisition of ICT skills by people brings about improved standard of living in both individuals and their communities while lack of skills brings about ineffective or skeletal use [6,7]. Also, when librarians posses skills in technology applications in the new information age, they will be more knowledgeable, creative, productive, forward looking, more focused and more competitive [8]. While some academic librarians in Nigeria are not computer literate, others have just a low level of computer skills [9] The importance of internet use cannot be over-emphasized. This is true because several people have politically, socially, economically, educationally, etc benefited from the internet world wide [10]. The web has transformed the entire research process which many librarians have benefited

New Automation Technology for Acquisitions and Collection Development Rosann Bazirjian,2019-12-06 This book first published in 1995 describes how automation is changing the face of acquisitions as librarians know it and making the future uncertain yet exciting It documents how libraries have increasingly moved to powerful second generation interfaceable or integrated systems that can control all aspects of library operations The libraries presented as examples show that increasing user expectations the siren call of cyberspace and network connectivity and administrative faith in the savings to be obtained from electronic technical services continue to drive the migration to higher level library management systems   The Internet and Special Librarians Sharyn J.
