The Irrelevant English Teacher:

The Irrelevant English Teacher Josiah Mitchell Morse, 1974 When I argue that we should not let our English classes degenerate into bull sessions whether about large metaphysical generalities or about war civil rights pollution our national priorities etc and that we should not grade themes and term papers on the basis of their moral social or political commitment it is not because I think such matters are unimportant but because I know that the problems they force upon us will never be solved by people whose muddled language prevents their thinking coherently and consecutively Black English is demoralized language an idiom of fettered minds the shuffling speech of slavery It served its bad purposes well It cannot serve the purposes of free men and women Those who would perpetuate it are romanticists clinging to corruption Joy is a value we undervalue at our political peril Once we have experienced joy we are less satisfied with dullness once we have joined in the joyful play of a lively mind we are much less easily impressed by the stencils and stereotypes of a Presidential commercial
