'Material Delight and the Joy of Living' Michael North, 2017-03-02 Eighteenth century Europe witnessed a commercialization of culture as it became less courtly and more urban The marketing of culture became separate from the production of culture New cultural entrepreneurs entered the stage the impresario the publisher the book seller the art dealer the auction house and the reading society served as middlemen between producers and consumers of culture and constituted at the same time the beginning of a cultural service sector Cultural consumption also played a substantial role in creating social identity One could demonstrate social status by attending an auction watching a play or listening to a concert Moreover and eventually more significant one could demonstrate connoisseurship and taste which became important indicators of social standing The centres of cultural exchange and consumption were initially the great cities of Europe In the course of the eighteenth century however cultural consumption penetrated much deeper for example into the numerous residential and university towns in Germany where a growing number of functional elites and burghers met in coffee houses and reading societies attended the theatre and opera and performed orchestral and chamber music together Journals novels and letters were also crucial in forming consumer culture in provincial Germany as the German states were remote from the cultural life of England and France the material reality of London and Paris often passed as a literary construction to Germany It is against this background and stimulated by the research of John Brewer on England that the book systematically explores this field for the first time in regard to the

Continent and especially to eighteenth century Germany Michael North focuses chapter by chapter on the new forms of entertainment concerts theatre opera reading societies travelling on the one hand and on the new material culture fashion gardens country houses furniture on the other At the centre of the discussion is the reception of English culture on the Continent and the competition between English and French fashions in the homes of German elites and burghers attracts special attention The book closes with an investigation of the role of cultural consumption for identity formation demonstrating the integration of Germany into a European cultural identity during the eighteenth century

The Joy of Sets Chris Horrocks,2017-12-22 It is a modern activity one of the primary ways we consume information and entertainment something we ll do over dinner at a bar or even standing on the street peering into a store window watch TV Many of us spend countless hours in front of the tube and even those of us who have proudly eliminated it from our lives can probably still rattle off the names of today s most popular shows But for as crucial as television viewing is in modern culture the television set itself as a ubiquitous object in our environment rarely captures our attention turn one off and it seems to all but disappear In this book Chris Horrocks tells the story of the television set exploring its contradictory presence in our lives as both a material object and a conveyor of illusory images Horrocks begins in the nineteenth century and television s prehistory as a fantastic futuristic concept He follows the television s journey from its strange roots in spiritualism imperialism and Victorian experiments in electro magnetism to the contested accounts of its actual invention looking at the work of engineering pioneers such as Philo Farnsworth and John

Logie Baird Unboxing sets all across the world he details how it arrived as an essential consumer product and began to play an extraordinary role as a bridge between public and private life Horrocks describes how the console and cabinet themselves expressed status and good taste and how their designs drew on cultural phenomena such as the space race and the avant garde He discusses how we have both loved it for what it can provide and reviled it as a sinister object literally controlling our thoughts and he shows how it has figured in other cultural realms such as the work of artists like Wolf Vostell and Nam June Paik Finally Horrock laments the death of the cathode ray tube and the emergence of the flat screen which has reduced the presence of the television as a significant material object Altogether The Joy of Sets brings this most elusive object into crystal clear critical and historical focus San Diego Magazine ,1980-07 The Mentor-world Traveler ,1926
