Thompson, 2013-06-03 In the first major examination of the diverse European efforts to colonize the Delaware Valley Mark L. Thompson offers a bold new interpretation of ethnic and national identities in colonial America For most of the seventeenth century the lower Delaware Valley remained a marginal area under no state's complete control English Dutch and Swedish colonizers all staked claims to the territory but none could exclude their rivals for long in part because Native Americans in the region encouraged the competition Officials and settlers alike struggled to determine which European nation would possess the territory and what liberties settlers would keep after their own colonies had surrendered The resulting struggle for power resonated on both sides of the Atlantic Ocean While the rivalry promoted patriots who trumpeted loyalties to their sovereigns and nations it also rewarded cosmopolitans who struck deals across imperial colonial and ethnic boundaries Just as often it produced men such as Henry Hudson Willem Usselinx Peter Minuit and William Penn who did both Ultimately The Contest for the Delaware Valley shows how colonists officials and Native Americans acted and reacted in inventive surprising ways Thompson demonstrates that even as colonial spokesmen debated claims and asserted fixed national identities their allegiances along with the settlers often shifted and changed Yet colonial competition imposed limits on this fluidity forcing officials and settlers to choose a side Offering their allegiances in return for security and freedom colonial subjects turned loyalty into liberty Their stories reveal what it meant to belong to a nation in the early modern Atlantic world
