Introductory catalogue [by H. Willett] of the collection of pottery & porcelain in the Brighton museum, lent by Henry Willett, 1879 Henry Willett,1879 The Joy of Entertaining Virginia Colton,1983 'Material Delight and the Joy of Living' Michael North,2017-03-02 Eighteenth century Europe witnessed a commercialization of culture as it became less courtly and more urban The marketing of culture became separate from the production of culture New cultural entrepreneurs entered the stage the impresario the publisher the book seller the art dealer the auction house and the reading society served as middlemen between producers and consumers of culture and constituted at the same time the beginning of a cultural service sector Cultural consumption also played a substantial role in creating social identity One could demonstrate social status by attending an auction watching a play or listening to a concert Moreover and eventually more significant one could demonstrate connoisseurship and taste which became important indicators of social standing The centres of cultural exchange and consumption were initially the great cities of Europe In the course of the eighteenth century however cultural consumption penetrated much deeper for example into the numerous residential and university towns in Germany where a growing number of functional elites and burghers met in coffee houses and reading societies attended the theatre and opera and performed orchestral and chamber music together Journals novels and letters were also crucial in forming consumer culture in provincial Germany as the German states were remote from the cultural life of England and France the material reality of London and Paris often passed as a literary construction to Germany It is against this background and stimulated by the research of John Brewer on England that the book systematically explores this field for the first time in regard to the Continent and especially to eighteenth century Germany Michael North focuses chapter by chapter on the new forms of entertainment concerts theatre opera reading societies travelling on the one hand and on the new material culture fashion gardens country houses furniture on the other At the centre of the discussion is the reception of English culture on the Continent and the competition between English and French fashions in the homes of German elites and burghers attracts special attention The book closes with an investigation of the role of cultural consumption for identity formation

Skibo, 2012-08-15 The 1992 publication of Pottery Function brought together the ethnographic study of the Kalinga and developed a method and theory for how pottery was actually used Since then there have been considerable advances in understanding how pottery was actually used particularly in the area of residue analysis abrasion and sooting carbonization

At the 20th anniversary of the book it is time to assess what has been done and learned One of the concerns of those working in pottery analysis is that they are unsure how to do use alteration analysis on their collection Another common concern is understanding intended pottery function the connections between technical choices and function This book is designed to answer these questions using case studies from the author and his colleagues for applying use alteration analysis to infer actual pottery function The focus of Understanding Pottery Function is on how practicing archaeologists can infer function from their ceramic collection

"Material Cultures, 1740-1920" Alla Myzelev, 2017-07-05 Interweaving notions of identity and subjectivity spatial contexts materiality and meaning this collection makes a significant contribution to debates around the status and interpretation of visual and material culture Material Cultures 1740-1920 has four primary theoretical and historiographic lines of inquiry The first is how concepts of otherness and difference inform imbricate and impose themselves on identity and the modes of acquisition as well as the objects themselves The second concern explores the intricacies of how objects and their subjects negotiate and represent spatial narratives The third thread attempts to unravel the ideological underpinnings of collections of individuals which inevitably and invariably rub up against the social the institutional and the political Finally at the heart of Material Cultures 1740-1920 is an intervention moving beyond the disciplinary ethos of material culture to argue more firmly for the aesthetic visual and semiotic potency inseparable from any understanding of material objects integral to the lives of their collecting subjects The collection argues that objects are semiotic conduits or signs of meanings pleasures and desires that are deeply subjective more often than not they reveal racial gendered and sexual identities As the volume demonstrates through its various case studies material and visual cultures are not as separate as our current disciplinary ethos would lead us to believe
