Abstract. The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of young adults. The study was conducted in a university setting. The participants were 100 young adults, aged 18-25, who were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The experimental group participated in a 12-week training program, while the control group did not. The physical health of the participants was measured using a variety of tests, including heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index. The psychological health of the participants was measured using a variety of tests, including a self-report questionnaire and a structured clinical interview. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly better physical and psychological health than the control group at the end of the 12-week training program. The findings of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can have a positive effect on the physical and psychological health of young adults.
