network that separates designated emission signals from sources at different epochs It thus provides for the first time an efficient way to extract signals from LIM data with foreground noise The method is complementary to conventional statistical methods such as cross correlation analysis When applied to three dimensional LIM data with wavelength information high reproducibility is achieved under realistic conditions The book further investigates how the trained machine extracts the signals and discusses the limitation of the ML methods Lastly an application of the LIM data to a study of cosmic reionization is presented This book benefits students and researchers who are interested in using machine learning to multi dimensional data not only in astronomy but also in general applications

Beyond Λ CDM Sownak Bose,2018-08-02 This book employs computer simulations of artificial Universes to investigate the properties of two popular alternatives to the standard candidates for dark matter DM and dark energy DE It confronts the predictions of theoretical models with observations using a sophisticated semi analytic model of galaxy formation Understanding the nature of dark matter DM and dark energy DE are two of the most central problems in modern cosmology While their important role in the evolution of the Universe has been well established namely that DM serves as the building blocks of galaxies and that DE accelerates the expansion of the Universe their true nature remains elusive In the first half the authors consider sterile neutrino DM motivated by recent claims that these particles may have finally been detected Using sophisticated models of galaxy formation the authors find that future observations of the high redshift Universe and faint dwarf galaxies in the Local Group can place strong constraints on the sterile neutrino scenario In the second half the authors propose and test novel numerical algorithms for simulating Universes with a modified theory of gravity as an alternative explanation to accelerated expansion The authors techniques improve the efficiency of these simulations by more than a factor of 20 compared to previous methods inviting the readers into a new era for precision cosmological tests of gravity

A Statistical and Multi-wavelength Study of Star Formation in Galaxies Corentin Schreiber,2016-09-12 This thesis presents a pioneering method for gleaning the maximum information from the deepest images of the far infrared universe obtained with the Herschel satellite reaching galaxies fainter by an order of magnitude than in previous studies Using these high quality measurements the author first demonstrates that the vast majority of galaxy star formation did not take place in merger driven starbursts over 90% of the history of the universe which suggests that galaxy growth is instead dominated by a steady infall of matter The author further demonstrates that massive galaxies suffer a gradual decline in their star formation activity providing an alternative path for galaxies to stop star formation One of the key unsolved questions in astrophysics is how galaxies acquired their mass in the course of cosmic time In the standard theory the merging of galaxies plays a major role in forming new stars Then old galaxies abruptly stop forming stars through an unknown process Investigating this theory requires an unbiased measure of the star formation intensity of galaxies which has been unavailable due to the dust obscuration of stellar light
