Places are shaped by indigenous factors

All places have a unique character which is formed by their many different characteristics. These factors can be traced to indigenous and indigenous.

Indigenism – the internal factors which shape a place's character. These could be physical, e.g. the location, topography and physical geography, or they could be human, e.g. the land use, built environment, infrastructure and demographic and economic characteristics.

Discussion - What are the physical factors that shape the character of a place?

Exam question practice

Outline the concept of a place (4 marks)

A place is defined as location plus meaning.

- Each place has a different meaning to different people and is therefore highly personal, experiential and subjective. A sense of place then, refers to those meanings which are associated with a place.
- Place can be applied to any scale, from a particular room in a building to a country or region, which evokes shared feelings in people.
- Place does not necessarily have to be a fixed location spatially or temporally, being a place is a product of its history – formal and personal – and a timeless ability to engender feelings of attachment based on subjective memories or distant historical events which are represented in architecture and geography.
- Places are dynamic and subject to constant change in their material structure and meaning. Places are not isolated or cut off from outside influences and as such people, ideas and objects pass in and out of a place in space and time they change it. They are therefore changing places.

Relationships and connections

History of Multimedial Landscapes - The invention of photography had a major impact on the development of the visual arts and the way we see the world. In the 19th century, photography was used to create a new way of seeing the world. In the 20th century, with the invention of film, photography became a more powerful tool for creating a new way of seeing the world.

Relationships and connections - The relationship between the visual arts and the way we see the world is a complex one. It is a relationship that has been shaped by a number of factors, including the invention of photography, the development of film, and the rise of the visual arts as a major cultural force.

How are places represented?

1. Maps/Geography - Maps can be used to show any sort of data that has a location, e.g. they can show where physical features are. They can also show quantitative demographic and economic data, e.g. different levels of income by location. Some maps can also show qualitative information, such as maps of values that show levels of happiness – these may be more helpful than quantitative maps for information about sense of place.

Benefits	Issues
Maps are simply representations of a place that display the located characteristics of it.	Can carry bias such as distortions, areas. You need to be analytical and critical when using maps as sources as they can misrepresent reality. The London Tube map is a classic example.
Maps give us reliable information about how a place has changed.	Maps in the past were often hand drawn and therefore open to subjectivity.
Maps can be used to show any sort of data that has a location, e.g. they can show where physical features are.	Finally, maps are not always updated that frequently.

Border Politics in a Global Era Kathleen Staudt,2017-06-16 Initially research in border studies relied mainly on generalizations from cases in the US Mexico borderlands before subsequently burgeoning in Europe Border Politics in a Global Era seeks to expand the study further to include the post colonial South in response to the major challenge of interdisciplinary border studies to explore borderlands in many contexts with and across a variety of states including the so called developing post colonial states Culled from decades of firsthand observations of borders from around the world and written with a critical and gender lens the text is framed with attention to history geography and the power of films and travelogues to represent people as others Professor Kathleen Staudt advances border concepts categories and theories to focus on trade migration and security highlighting the importance of states their length of time since independence and border bureaucrats discretionary practices Drawing on her Border Inequalities Database for a global perspective Staudt calls for reducing inequalities and building institutions in the common grounds of borderlands The book features maps and other visuals with lists of links at the close of most chapters Broadly comparative in nature Border Politics in a Global Era will appeal not only to students of border studies it will also stimulate attention in comparative politics international studies and political geography

Cosmopolitan Learning for a Global Era Sarah Richardson,2015-09-16 Ensuring that higher education students are fully prepared for lives as global citizens is a pressing concern in the contemporary world This book draws on insights from cosmopolitan thought to identify how people from different backgrounds can find common ground By applying cosmopolitan insights to higher education practice Sarah Richardson charts how students can be given the opportunity to experience a truly international education which emphasises deep cultural exchange rather than mere transactional contact Written in an engaging and accessible style the author uses empirical evidence to show that simply studying alongside those different to themselves or studying overseas are inadequate in preparing students to lead the diverse societies of tomorrow Instead the book calls for a coherent approach to higher education that properly prepares students to lead global lives Chapters highlight a number of key aspects of higher education practice from curriculum to pedagogy to educator skills to assessment and demonstrate how these can be reconsidered to give students the opportunity to gain cosmopolitan attributes during their higher education Cosmopolitan Learning for a Global Era will be of great interest to researchers scholars and postgraduate students with a particular focus on cosmopolitan thought international education and higher education more broadly as well as university educators and leaders across a wide range of disciplinary areas
