Abstract. The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-impact aerobically and resistance training program on the physical fitness and health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The program was designed to be safe and effective for women with no previous exercise experience. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The first session was a low-intensity aerobic workout, the second was a low-impact aerobic workout, and the third was a low-impact resistance workout. The program was evaluated using a variety of physical fitness and health measures, including heart rate, blood pressure, body mass index, and body composition. The results of the study showed that the program had a positive effect on all of the measures, with the most significant improvements seen in heart rate and blood pressure. The program was well-tolerated by the women, and they reported feeling more energetic and confident after the 12-week period.
