Strategy For Creation:

The Flexible Firm Julian Birkinshaw, Peter Hagström, 2000-03-16 The pace of change in the business world is becoming faster This book provides a detailed account of the network like organization forms that some firms are adopting to make themselves more flexible and responsive to changing technologies and customer demands As these organizations become more pervasive the winners will be those firms that develop the specific capabilities that are needed to thrive in a networked world Paradoxically such capabilities are developed not only at the firm level but also in the relationships the firm has with its external network and in the operating units within the firm This perspective has implications for the resource based view of the firm in the field of strategic management suggesting that the development of capabilities is a more complex and multi level process than was traditionally thought This book brings together eleven chapters each focusing on a particular aspect of capability development in the networked firm It is based on research in five big Swedish firms Ericsson Volvo Skandia Pharmacia Upjohn SE Banken as well as a number of other well known firms such as HP and ABB The book will be essential reading for advanced students in strategy and international business wanting to keep abreast of current thinking and company practices

Future Scenarios for the German Pharmaceutical Industry Pawel Netreba, 2010-08-26 Inhaltsangabe Introduction The global pharmaceutical industry has been a great success story in recent years The pharmaceutical industry's innovative power has significantly contributed to the improvement of the quality of health care Medical innovations have completely transformed the treatment paradigm have dramatically increased individuals chances of surviving certain diseases such as cancer and heart disease and have reduced the likelihood and impact of diseases such as HIV AIDS or arteriosclerosis From a business perspective the pharmaceutical industry has been the most profitable one during the last decade With a median profit margin of 17 percent compared to 3.1 percent for all other industries on the Fortune 500 list and representing 20 percent of all global research and development R D investments as well as generating revenues of over USD 700 billion the pharmaceutical industry has visibly shaped the global business world However the pharmaceutical industry is facing an increasingly volatile and uncertain environment Evolving challenges such as an increase in regulatory state interference including the cost containment measures of health care reform decreasing R D productivity and many blockbusters going off patent are just some examples of the complexity and upheaval the industry is exposed to Due to the increasing complexity and volatility traditional planning tools are no longer suitable to adequately support conventional decision making processes since they insufficiently take uncertainty into account This problem can be resolved by implementing scenario based planning This tool is applied to depict possible future scenarios i.e. to identify a wide range of possible developments which makes it a suitable tool in a volatile and complex environment Hence the objective of this thesis is to develop four plausible scenarios and secondly to determine a core strategy as well as strategic options for the pharmaceutical industry in Germany First an overview of the pharmaceutical industry in Germany is presented and major industry related opportunities and challenges examined Second the theoretical foundation of scenario based planning and its methodology is discussed The HHL scenario based approach to strategic planning is presented and briefly explained Third the approach is applied to the pharmaceutical industry in Germany and four distinct scenarios developed Finally a core strategy and strategic options are developed
