Regions in Recession and Resurgence Michael Chisholm, 2015-03-27 The world economy has undergone rapid evolution in recent decades along with changes in the importance of industries and their organization and sharp changes in the fortunes of regions There are differences of opinion regarding the mainsprings of change and development and the role of governments in fostering national output In order to show the relvance of these changes to regional economies the book focuses on the different schools of economic thought from the neo classical through Keynesian to Marxist radical ideas and monetarist supply side thinking providing a brief description of their structure in non spatial terms The way these theories map into contrasting ideas regarding the mechanisms of regional economic growth is then explained The book concentrates on developed economies and explicitly seeks to confront theory with fact fact with theory Bringing together non spatial economic thery regional growth theory and relevant empirical data this book is intended for students in geography and regional economics but will also be of interest for those studying politics and government

The Government of Emergency Stephen J. Collier, Andrew Lakoff, 2021-11-30 In the middle decades of the twentieth century in the wake of economic depression war and in the midst of the Cold War an array of technical experts and government officials developed a substantial body of expertise to contain and manage the disruptions to American society caused by unprecedented threats Today the tools invented by these mid twentieth century administrative reformers are largely taken for granted assimilated into the everyday workings of government As Stephen Collier and Andrew Lakoff argue in this book the American government s current practices of disaster management can be traced back to this era Collier and Lakoff argue that an understanding of the history of this initial formation of the emergency state is essential to an appreciation of the distinctive ways that the U S government deals with crises and emergencies or fails to deal with them today This book focuses on historical episodes in emergency or disaster planning and management Some of these episodes are well known and have often been studied while others are little remembered today The significance of these planners and managers is not that they were responsible for momentous technical innovations or that all their schemes were realized successfully Their true significance lies in the fact that they formulated a way of understanding and governing emergencies that has come to be taken for granted

Development Issues of Our Time Rameshwar Prasad Misra, 1985 Towards Equitable Progress K. Locana Gunaratna, 2018-06-02 This book gathers a collection of essays presented from the perspective of a spatial planner whose working life has been immersed in South Asia. It concerns some of the serious challenges that need to be confronted in the South Asian context including the externalities and ethical concerns that arise in the process of development. The mid 20th century saw a considerable focus in the West on assisting those countries emerging from European colonial domination. Theories were propounded and international agencies established to facilitate a process called development in these countries. However, even after six decades of extraordinary expenditures and effort, millions among the targeted populations remain illiterate, live in abject poverty and are the most vulnerable groups to external disasters, debilitating diseases and untimely death. In addition, the book reveals the theoretical inadequacies that negatively impact ongoing development efforts. Lastly, it identifies an available alternative set of science-based approaches that could facilitate the serious pursuit of equitable progress in South Asia and potentially also in other low and middle income countries.

The City in the Developing World Robert B. Potter, Sally Lloyd-Evans, 2014-09-25. The City in the Developing World is a comprehensive and up-to-date introduction to urbanisation in developing countries. The goal of this text is to place an understanding of the developing world city in its wider global context. First, this is done by developing the concept of social surplus product as a key to understanding the character of the contemporary Third World city. Second, throughout this text, the city in developing areas is centrally placed in the context of global social, economic, political and cultural change. Thus, the important themes of globalisation, modernity and postmodernity are examined both in relation to the structure of sets of towns and cities which make up the national or regional urban system and in respect of ideas and concepts dealing with the morphology, structure and social patterning of individual urban areas. The City in the Developing World is a core text for second and third year undergraduates in the fields of geography, development studies, planning, economics and the social sciences, taking options which deal with development issues, development theory, gender and development and Third World development.

Learning Transnational Learning Åge Mariussen, Seija Virkkala, 2013-05-02. Systems of innovation that are conducted within national borders can preserve inefficient solutions and prevent development. This has led to a feeling that transnational learning strategies are more and more desirable. In practice, the field of transnational learning has been dominated by various policy-making institutions such as the OECD and European Union working through different types of policy instruments and programs such as structural funds, open methods of coordination as well as international research institutions and networks set up by cooperating national governments working on comparative analysis benchmarking and indicators This book lays out a set of methods which can further enhance the experience of transnational learning starting from the sociological ideas promoted by Charles Sabel of learning through monitoring and by Marie Laure Djelic and others of the translation of experiences between different countries Case studies and examples are collected from three fields industrial development tourism and local government
