Reliability, Life Testing and the Prediction of Service Lives Sam C. Saunders, 2010-04-26 The prerequisite for reading this text is a calculus based course in Probability and Mathematical Statistics along with the usual curricular mathematical requirements for every science major. For graduate students from disciplines other than mathematical sciences, much advantage, viz. both insight and mathematical maturity is gained by having had experience quantifying the assurance for safety of structures, operability of systems or health of persons. It is presumed that each student will have some familiarity with Mathematica or Maple or better yet also have available some survival analysis software such as S Plus or R to handle the computations with the data sets. This material has been selected under the conviction that the most practical aid any investigator can have is a good theory. The course is intended for persons who will during their professional life be concerned with the theoretical aspects of applied science. This implies consulting with industrial mathematicians, statisticians, lead engineers in various fields, physicists, chemists, material scientists and other technical specialists who are collaborating to solve some difficult technological scientific problem. Accordingly, there are sections devoted to the department of applied mathematicians during consulting. This corresponds to the bedside manner of physicians and is an important aspect of professionalism.
