Textbook Of Geriatric Medicine:

Oxford Textbook of Geriatric Medicine Jean-Pierre Michel, B. Lynn Beattie, Finbarr C. Martin, Jeremy Walston, 2017-12-08

Over the past two decades there has been a marked change in global age demographics with the number of over 60s increasing by 82% and the number of centenarians by 715%. This new found longevity is testament to the success of recent advances in medicine but poses significant challenges to multiple areas of health care concerning older patients. Building upon its predecessor's reputation as the definitive resource on the subject, this new edition of the Oxford Textbook of Geriatric Medicine offers a comprehensive and multinational examination of the field. Fully revised to reflect the current state of geriatric medicine, it examines the medical and scientific basis of clinical issues as well as the ethical, legal, and socio-economic concerns for healthcare policy and systems. Over 170 chapters are broken up into 16 key sections covering topics ranging from policy and key concepts through to infection, cancer, palliative medicine, and healthy ageing. New material includes focus on the evolving concepts of malnutrition, sarcopenia, frailty, and related geriatric syndromes, and integration of geriatric principles from public health, primary and specialized care, and transitional stages from home to emergency medicine and surgery, rehabilitation, and long-term care. The Oxford Textbook of Geriatric Medicine brings together specialists from across the globe to provide every physician involved in the care of older patients with a comprehensive resource on all the clinical problems they are likely to encounter as well as on related psychological, philosophical, and social issues.

Oxford Textbook of Geriatric Medicine J. Grimley Evans, 2000 Few if any diseases are specific to old age However factors such as multiple pathology and impaired feedback control mechanisms lead to non specific or atypical presentation of disease to difficulties in diagnosis to rapid deterioration of untreated disease and to a high incidence of complications The geriatrician must include rehabilitation in clinical care plans and also be aware of the cultural gap that may exist between the old and the younger members of a changing society Ethical issues may arise in the distribution of scarce societal resources between different age groups and in considering the needs and rights of caring relatives as well as those of the disabled older patient Based on these considerations this new textbook is designed to supplement rather than substitute for textbooks of general medicine As a frame of reference it is specifically designed as a companion volume to the Oxford Textbook of Medicine It draws on an international authorship with an emphasis on combining the fruits of experience in clinical geriatrics with a scientific base in research The various chapters therefore offer both scholarly reviews of fields of knowledge in medical gerontology and firmly practical advice on clinical problems Field reviews include biological origins and mechanisms of aging age associated changes in immunology and other host defences injury responses temperature homeostasis memory and the aging eye Practical issues include the management of foot problems back pain and infections in older patients Further chapters deal with ethical issues the difficulties of carers and the design of services The book includes traditional concerns of geriatric medicine such as hypothermia and postural hypotension but also takes a wider perspective on aging with chapters on topics including the post menopausal state and aging in the Third World References have been kept to a moderate number aimed at providing a rational and selective entree to the literature rather than a comprehensive bibliography
