Industry in the Wilderness by Frank Rasky is an account of the overcoming of natural elements in order to harvest the resource wealth of northwestern Ontario. It is part of the Dundurn Local History series. It is an oral history of lumberjacks, gold seekers, bush pilots, and early hydro men. Herein lies the major problem with the book: Rasky attempts to cover four important aspects of northwestern Ontario in only 128 pages. This impossible task is even further complicated by the fact that more than half of the book is devoted to pictures and diagrams. The pictures and diagrams dominate the book to such an extent that one could ignore the text and still find a wealth of information about the topic. The diagrams of a paper mill, a gold mine, and a hydro electric power plant could be a valuable teaching aid to students interested in those areas. The pictures are exceptionally good. Molly meets Nakina, who is Ojibwe and a survivor of the residential school system in high school, and they form a strong friendship. As the bond between them grows, Molly, who is not native, finds herself a silent witness to the racism and abuse her friend must face each day. In this time of political awakening, Molly turns to her camera to try to make sense of the intolerance she sees in the world around her. Her photos become a way to freeze time and observe the complex human politics of her hometown. Her search for understanding uncovers some hard truths about Nakina's past and leaves Molly with a growing sense of guilt over her own silence. When personal tragedy tears them apart, Molly must travel a long, hard road in search of forgiveness and friendship. The Golden Tower Fiona Patton, 2008 Having discovered their destinies and grown into their individual powers, Brax Spar and Graize face off in an epic confrontation that will ignite a war and promote the rise to power of a new player among the Gods in the sequel to The Silver Lake. The Dragon Hunters' Secret David G.
