

TRACHEOESOPHAGEAL SPEECH: VOCAL REHABILITATION AFTER TOTAL LARYNGECTOMY.*

MARK I. SINGER, M.D.,
Indianapolis, IN.

ABSTRACT.

Treatment of laryngeal cancer has evolved over nearly 100 years and includes many methods to conserve the function of speech. It was understood from the inception of total laryngectomy that diversion of exhaled pulmonary air into the pharynx or esophagus would produce satisfactory speech. The effect on safe deglutition of the pharyngeal fistulae limited the wide applicability of these techniques.

The introduction of a silicone bivalve device for use in a tracheoesophageal tunnel permits large numbers of laryngectomies to use tracheoesophageal speech. Acoustic, intelligibility, and aerodynamic studies are described for four laryngectomies and reveal that this method more nearly approximates normal laryngeal speech than conventional esophageal speech. The criteria for contemporary treatment of laryngeal carcinoma are not altered by this rehabilitative method, and expected survival rates are not likely to be affected. The findings and analysis of this method of alaryngeal speech rehabilitation may have important implications for future therapy of laryngeal carcinoma.

Speech is a singular human trait that allows man to share his thoughts with others. It may be said that communication is the beginning of understanding. The earliest recognition of the larynx and its function for speech and respiration is attributed to Aristotle in Historia Animalium written in 400 B.C.<sup>1</sup>

Although the larynx generates the sounds for speech, it is well known that this is not the primary function of this structure. Negus<sup>2</sup> interpreted the evolution of the larynx initially as a valve to protect the airway with later developmental modifications for olfaction, deglutition, regulation of intrathoracic pressures, and phonation. Pressman and Koloman<sup>3</sup> later placed the major role of the larynx as that of a "protective sphincter" with tone production secondary to its primary function.

The incidence of laryngeal carcinoma is 1/100,000 population.<sup>4</sup> Uncontrolled, it inexorably destroys the function of this organ, profoundly affecting speech, deglutition, and respiration. The therapy for this disease evolved over a 100 year period with numerous techniques proposed to preserve the ability to speak. The location of the neoplasm within the larynx and to contiguous structures affects the therapy and eventual outcome. The biological behavior of cancer influences decisions regarding surgery and radiation therapy. The importance of voice preservation led to the development of conservation laryngectomy procedures which permit adequate resection of the tumor and maintenance of the voice.

Total laryngectomy is used for patients whose tumor cannot be eliminated by a partial procedure or radiation therapy. Rehabilitation of these patients may consist of learning esophageal speech, an artificial larynx, or an additional operative procedure to restore continuity of the respiratory and alimentary tracts. It is common for the individual who is affected by cancer of the larynx not only to suffer the ravages of this disease, but also to be burdened by the failure to regain speech. In the United States it is estimated that on an annual basis there are 10,900 new cases of laryngeal cancer and approximately one-half are treated by laryngectomy.<sup>5</sup> No more than one-half successfully develop esophageal speech, and it is the fear of speech failure coupled with the anxieties of having cancer that has profound psychological effects on these patients.

HISTORICAL REVIEW.

Effective therapy for laryngeal carcinoma began in Europe in the second half of the 19th century. Total laryngectomy was conceptualized by Watson, Von Langenbeck, and Billroth<sup>6</sup> by the mid 1860's. Vincenz Czerny,<sup>7</sup> working as an assistant to Billroth, published a report of a successful canine laryngectomy by 1870, and suggested an artificial larynx which was a "T" shaped tube inserted into the trachea and pharynx. Theodor Billroth successfully performed the first total laryngectomy for carcinoma in 1873, and his associate Carl Gussenbauer constructed an artificial larynx for this patient who spoke 3 weeks postoperatively.<sup>8</sup> Although the patient survived this early laryngectomy, he eventually succumbed a few months later to recurrent carcinoma.

Gussenbauer's device was a bifurcated tracheal tube incorporating a musical reed for sound production. These early instruments were designed to divert exhaled pulmonary air across the sound-producing reed and introduce it into a planned pharyngostoma for speech articulation (Fig. 1). Billroth demonstrated that a separate pharyngostoma and cracheostoma were necessary to diminish the problems of aspiration and sepsis. This decreased the formidable mortality of the procedure, reportedly as high as 50% of cases.<sup>9</sup>

Malignancies involving structures of the head and neck frequently impact the most fundamental aspects of human existence namely those functions related to voice and speech production eating and swallowing Abnormalities in voice production and in some instances its complete loss are common following treatment for laryngeal voice box cancer Similarly speech eating and swallowing may be dramatically disrupted in those where oral structures e g the tongue jaw hard palate pharynx etc are surgically ablated to eliminate the cancer Consequently the range and degree of deficits that may be experienced secondary to the treatment of head and neck cancer HNCa are often substantial This need is further reinforced by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention who have estimated that the number of individuals who will be newly diagnosed with HNCa will now double every 10 years This estimate becomes even more critical given that an increasing number of those who are newly diagnosed will be younger and will experience the possibility of long term survival post treatment Contemporary rehabilitation efforts for those treated for HNCa increasingly demand that clinicians actively consider and address multiple issues Beyond the obvious concerns specific to any type of cancer i e the desire for curative treatment clinical efforts that address physical psychological communicative and social consequences secondary to HNCa treatment are essential components of all effective rehabilitation programs Comprehensive HNCa rehabilitation ultimately seeks to restore multiple areas of functioning in the context of the disabling effects of treatment In this regard rehabilitation often focuses on restoration of function while reducing the impact of residual treatment related deficits on the individual s overall functioning well being quality of life QOL and ultimately optimize survivorship Regardless of the treatment method s pursued for HNCa e g surgery radiotherapy chemoradiation or combined methods additional problems beyond those associated with voice speech eating and swallowing frequently exist For example post treatment changes in areas such as breathing maintaining nutrition limitations in physical capacity because surgical reconstruction such as deficits in shoulder functioning concerns specific to cosmetic alterations and associated disfigurement and deficits in body image are common Those treated for HNCa also may experience significant pain depression stigma and subsequent social isolation Concerns of this type have led clinicians and researchers to describe HNCa as the most emotionally traumatic form of cancer It is therefore essential that clinicians charged with the care and rehabilitation of those treated for HNCa actively seek to identify acknowledge and systematically address a range of physical psychological social and communication problems Efforts that systematically consider this range of post treatment sequelae are seen as critical to any effort directed toward enhanced rehabilitation outcomes Actively and purposefully addressing post treatment challenges may increase the likelihood of both short and long term rehabilitation success in this challenging

clinical population Current information suggests that successful clinical outcomes for those with HNCa are more likely to be realized when highly structured yet flexible interdisciplinary programs of care are pursued Yet contemporary educational resources that focus not only on management of voice speech eating and swallowing disorders but also address issues such as shoulder dysfunction due to neck dissection the significant potential for cosmetic alterations can offer a much broader perspective on rehabilitation Contemporary surgical treatment frequently involves reconstruction with extensive procedures that require donor sites that include both soft tissue from a variety of locations e g forearm thigh etc as well as bone e g the scapula Collectively resources that address these issues and many other concerns and the resultant social implications of HNCa and its treatment can serve to establish a comprehensive framework for clinical care Consequently providing a highly specialized and comprehensive educational resource specific to HNCa rehabilitation is currently needed The proposed edited book is designed to address this void in a single authoritative resource that is also accessible to the clinical readership Integral to this proposed book is information that guides clinical approaches to HNCa rehabilitation in addition to offering emphasis on the direct impact of changes in voice speech and swallowing and the impact of such losses on outcomes Finally while several other published sources currently exist see attached list the emphasis of these books is directed either toward the identification and diagnosis of malignant disease clinical and surgical pathology associated efforts directed toward biomedical aspects of cancer and its treatment or those with a focus on a single clinical problem or approach to rehabilitation Therefore the content of the proposed multi chapter text centers on delivering a systematically structured comprehensive and clinically oriented presentation on a range of topics that will provide readers at a variety of levels with a strong well integrated and empirically driven foundation to optimize the clinical care of those with HNCa The primary audience for this textbook is undergraduate and graduate level students in Speech Language Pathology as well as practitioners especially hospital based practitioners in Speech Language Pathology other key audiences include junior and senior level otolaryngology residents and fellows translational researchers in head and neck cancer related medical specialists e g radiation oncology oncology nurses and potentially other rehabilitation professionals such as occupational therapists counseling psychologists social workers and rehabilitation counselors
