- The central feature of a shaman's initiation is her affliction with an illness known as a shinbyeong. This is also called the "spirit sickness" or "self-loss" and characterized by a loss of appetite, insomnia, visual and auditory hallucinations. The illness is cured by a ritual called a naerim-kut, which also serves to induct the new shaman.

Trafzer, 2012-01-01 Clifford Trafzer's disturbing new work Death Stalks the Yakama examines life death and the shockingly high mortality rates that have persisted among the fourteen tribes and bands living on the Yakama Reservation in the state of Washington The work contains a valuable discussion of Indian beliefs about spirits traditional causes of death mourning ceremonies and memorials More significant however is Trafzer's research into heretofore unused parturition and death records from 1888 1964 In these documents he discovers critical evidence to demonstrate how and why many reservation people died in epidemics of pneumonia tuberculosis and heart disease Death Stalks the Yakama takes into account many variables including age gender listed causes of death residence and blood quantum In addition analyses of fetal and infant mortality rates as well as crude death rates arising from tuberculosis pneumonia heart disease accidents and other causes are presented Trafzer argues that Native Americans living on the Yakama Reservation were in fact in jeopardy as a result of the reservation system itself Not only did this alien and artificial culture radically alter traditional ways of life but sanitation methods housing hospitals public education medicine and medical personnel affiliated with the reservation system all proved inadequate and each in its own way contributed significantly to high Yakama death rates      A System of Biblical Psychology Franz Delitzsch, 1867      In the Mind of Something Greater Lisa C.
