Dream Doctor Arthur B Reeve, 1915-02-07 Here is another strange thing It may or may not be of importance but it is strange nevertheless Before Maitland died they sent for his wife He was still conscious when she reached the hospital could recognise her seemed to want to speak but could neither talk nor move It was pathetic She was grief stricken of course But she did not faint She is not of the fainting kind It was what she said that impressed everyone I knew it I knew it she cried She had dropped on her knees by the side of the bed I felt it Only the other night I had the horrible dream I saw him in a terrific struggle I could not see what it was it seemed to be an invisible thing I ran to him then the scene shifted I saw a funeral procession and in the casket I could see through the wood his face oh it was a warning It has come true I feared it even though I knew it was only a dream Often I have had the dream of that funeral procession and always I saw the same face his face Oh it is horrible terrible The Dream Doctor: the New Adventures of Craig Kennedy, Scientific Detective Arthur
