Abstract

Recent large language models (LLMs) have shown the capability to detect hate speech processing. Further integrating LLM with vision enables the need to detect hate speech within a multimodal. Visual language models (VLMs) such as LLaVA, Phi3.5, or GPT-4o can understand captions (text) and/or images (visual) inputs. Consequently, they are a natural application of large models that can be potentially used to detect hate speech. Despite this, this article addresses a gap concerning an unexplored task: detect hate speech in the text, the role of the LLM in the text, and the role of the LLM in the image. We study the ability of LLM to detect hate speech and detect hate speech in the text and the image. This is a natural extension to the ability of the multimodal LLM model and shows its strength and weakness in this task.

1 Introduction

The rapid development of artificial intelligence (AI) has brought about a paradigm shift in the way we detect and process hate speech. Recent multimodal models (e.g., GPT-4o, Gemini, etc.) have shown the capability to detect hate speech in the text, the role of the LLM in the text, and the role of the LLM in the image. This is a natural extension to the ability of the multimodal LLM model and shows its strength and weakness in this task. The paper is a preprint of the author.

Large language models (LLMs) have shown excellent performance in detecting hate speech processing within a text input. With a long history of hate speech language from the creation of the LLM, the multimodal models (e.g., GPT-4o, Gemini, etc.) have shown the capability to detect hate speech in the text, the role of the LLM in the text, and the role of the LLM in the image. This is a natural extension to the ability of the multimodal LLM model and shows its strength and weakness in this task. The paper is a preprint of the author.

In this paper, we introduce a simple but effective framework designed for detecting hate speech in the text, the role of the LLM in the text, and the role of the LLM in the image. This is a natural extension to the ability of the multimodal LLM model and shows its strength and weakness in this task. The paper is a preprint of the author.

Visual language models (VLMs). With multimodal language models, hate speech detection is a difficult task, usually requiring multimodal models (e.g., GPT-4o, Gemini, etc.) to detect hate speech in the text, the role of the LLM in the text, and the role of the LLM in the image. This is a natural extension to the ability of the multimodal LLM model and shows its strength and weakness in this task. The paper is a preprint of the author.
