1. Individuals identify different cultures that they would not want to be from. Why are some of the people interviewed ethnocentric?
2. After having their DNA analyzed, the participants learned that their ancestry was more complex than they first thought. Do you agree that "extremism" and prejudice would be reduced if everyone knew their ancestry and shared heritage? Why or why not?
3. The tag line of the video is "an open world begins with an open mind." How does this relate to intercultural competence?

I think that some of the people who were interviewed are ethnocentric due to two possible reasons. I mean that there are some cases where there is a situation where two different cultures are involved in a conflict or a problem that causes people from each culture to have an ethnocentric view toward the other. An example of this could be India and Pakistan, two countries that have been in conflict for a long time. This caused Pakistanis and Indians to have ethnocentric thinking towards the culture of the other country.

The second reason may be due to misinformation, many times we tend to judge other cultures without even taking the time to know what the culture represents. Also, we often get carried away by opinions or comments regarding another culture, causing us to adopt an ethnocentric way of thinking toward other cultures.

Surely if each one of us knew our heritage, prejudices and extremism would be reduced. This would be because each person would realize that it is impossible to have a 100% pure heritage and that in many cases our heritage is also linked to other cultures that we may not know or like. Learning about our heritage would allow us to be people more motivated to learn about the different cultures we belong to and be more tolerant towards the other cultures we don't like since we may also belong to them.

The slogan "an open world begins with an open mind" is related to intercultural competence because in order to be able to comment on a culture it is important to have a certain level of knowledge about it, so as not to misinform about that culture. It is important to have a certain level of knowledge about a culture in order not to

Speech Communication Matters Second Edition Chapter 3:

Anthropology Matters, Second Edition Shirley A. Fedorak, 2012-10-24 Anthropology Matters places the study of anthropology concretely in the world by which it is surrounded. It takes a question-based approach to introducing important anthropological concepts by embedding those concepts in contemporary global issues that will interest students. The second edition of this popular text has been updated throughout and includes four new chapters on language revitalization, social media, and social revolutions, human migration, and the role of NGOs in international development practice. Students can now engage with the most up-to-date issues while learning to think anthropologically. Teachers Edition Randall McCutcheon, 2001-02 Describes how to research, organize, write, and deliver different kinds of speeches and discusses related forms of communication such as debates and oral interpretation. Communication Matters Jeremy Packer, Stephen B. Crofts Wiley, 2013-06-17 Communication has often been understood as a realm of immaterial, insubstantial phenomena: images, messages, thoughts, languages, cultures, and ideologies mediating our embodied experience of the concrete world. Communication Matters challenges this view, assembling leading scholars in the fields of Communication, Rhetoric, and English to focus on the materiality of communication. Building on the work of materialist theorists such as Gilles Deleuze, Michel Foucault, Friedrich Kittler, and Henri Lefebvre, the essays collected here examine the materiality of discourse itself and the constitutive force of communication in the production of the real. Communication Matters presents original work that rethinks communication as material and situates materialist approaches to communication within the broader materiality turn emerging in the humanities and social sciences. This collection will be of interest to researchers and postgraduate students in Media, Communication Studies, and Rhetoric. The book includes images of the digital media installations of Francesca Talenti. Professor, Department of Communication Studies, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Drawing on the analysis of conversations from focus groups, phone ins, and broadcast interviews with members of the public, Greg Myers argues that we must go back to these encounters asking questions such as what members of the public thought they were being asked who they were talking as and whom they were talking to He reveals that people don't carry a store of opinions ready to tell strangers they use opinions in order to get along with other people and how they say things is as important as what they say Engaging and informative this book illuminates debates on research methods the public sphere and deliberative democracy on broadcast talk and on what it means to participate in public life
