Cognitive Issues in Motor Expertise J.

Starkes, F. Allard, 1993-09-15 The intent of this book is to describe those perceptual and cognitive components which contribute to skilled motor performance in a wide variety of disciplines including sports, microsurgery, video games and speech. Also considered are issues in the measurement of motor skill, the development of motor skill across the life span and the importance of individual differences in the development of motor skill. Many chapters contain studies employing the expertise approach, used so successfully to study cognitive skills in psychology. Using this approach, expert performers are compared to novices on domain-relevant laboratory tasks in order to determine whether specific cognitive or perceptual processes are related to performance differences. This volume will be of value to kinesiologists, sport psychologists, physical educators and cognitive psychologists who are interested in a new perspective on the nature of motor skills. The majority of the chapters include reviews of the literature necessary to understand the case being made. Thus the book may be understood by any reader with a basic course in psychology or motor behavior.

The Realities of 'Reality' - Part III: Impacts of Speed and Time Optimization on Reality Fritz Dufour, MBA, DESS, 2019-08-28

The main theme of this book is the impacts of speed and time optimization on reality or more precisely on our modern society But first it sets the background by exploring the physics behind the concepts of speed and time how they came about how we became aware of them and how did the new world of speed emerge and why does it seem to be inescapable It explores the speed of light and the speed of sound by linking them to our environment It introduces the notion of Arrow of time or entropy which grows from the past to the present is expected to keep growing in the future and hypothesizes that this is perhaps why our craving for speed and time optimization is here to stay with no end in sight An important point discussed is that because of memories and experiences people may choose to live either in the past present or future which leads to the notions of presentism and eternalism The book argues that while for presentists only the present is real for eternalists both the past present and future are equally real The book makes the case about speed and time optimization as a legacy of modernity by laying out the differences between modernism modernization and modernity itself It shows how modernity is all about the now or the present rather than the past and how as such it s all about the new So then the changes that are now happening in our modern world can be traced back to a segment of history that dates back to the beginning of modernity that is which began with the Protestant Reformation and is now rapidly approaching closure in the world of today s extreme finance It argues about the technological implications of speed and time in the 21st century It shows how technology has become an integral part of human existence and that it is inconceivable one can even think of escaping it This Part III of the series shows the link between high speed trading and faster connectivity and faster computers It shows how thanks to the Internet information became freely accessible and is spreading faster and faster It shows how supercomputers not only allow people to address the biggest and most complex problems they also allow people to solve problems faster even those that could fit on servers or clusters of PCs This rapid time to solution is critical in some aspects of emergency preparedness and national defense where the solutions produced are only valuable if they can be acted on in a timely manner Finally the social and psychological implications of speed and time in the 21st century are also addressed by considering the upside and the downside of moving fast meaning leading a fast paced life The argument presented in the book is based on the analysis and the importance of stress in our daily lives and also explains the notion of chronobiology Our biological clocks drive our circadian rhythms An interesting point is that blind people may not perceive time the same way as the non blind Furthermore the book shows how we perceive time differently as we age compared to when we were young It also makes the case for the perception of time in dreams and in real life Speed and time optimization may be deceiving according to this Part III of the series This can be proven by questions such as 1 Is going over the speed limit really worth it and 2 Is the saying Slow down to go faster a paradox

Multiple Muscle Systems Jack M. Winters, Savio L-Y. Woo, 2012-12-06 The picture on the front cover of this book depicts a young man pulling a fishnet a task of practical relevance for many centuries It is a complex task involving load transmission throughout the body intricate balance and eye head hand coordination The quest toward understanding how we perform such tasks with skill and grace often in the presence of unpredictable perturbations has a long history However despite a history of magnificent sculptures and drawings of the human body which vividly depict muscle activity and interaction until more recent times our state of knowledge of human movement was rather primitive During the past century this has changed we now have developed a considerable database regarding the composition and basic properties of muscle and nerve tissue and the basic causal relations between neural function and biomechanical movement Over the last few decades we have also seen an increased appreciation of the importance of musculoskeletal biomechanics the neuromotor system must control movement within a world governed by mechanical laws We have now collected quantitative data for a wealth of human movements Our capacity to understand the data we collect has been enhanced by our continually evolving modeling capabilities and by the availability of computational power What have we learned This book is designed to help synthesize our current knowledge regarding the role of muscles in human movement The study of human movement is not a mature discipline Journal of Rehabilitation Research & Development ,1988 Sports and Nationalism in Latin / o America H. Fernández L'Hoeste, R. Irwin, J. Poblete, 2015-05-06 This collection interrogates sports in Latin America as a key terrain in which nation is defined and populations are interpellated through emotionally charged practices state policy media representations and sports play itself by professionals national teams and amateurs of inclusion and exclusion

Softball John Monteleone, Deborah Crisfield, 1999-03-15 Details the differences from men's softball and offers effective strategies Neural Implementations of Expertise Merim Bilalić, Robert Langner, Guillermo Campitelli, Luca

Turella, Wolfgang Grodd, 2015-12-18 When we think about expertise we usually consider people who master tasks at a level not reachable by most other people Although we rarely realise it however most humans are experts in many aspects of everyday life This expertise enables us to find our way through a complex environment that is our life For instance we can instantly recognise multiple objects and relations between them to form a meaningful unit such as an office Thus research on expertise is not only important to investigate the cognitive and neural processes within an elite group but it is also a powerful tool to understand how everyone can acquire complex skills The goal of this Research Topic is to shed further light on the common and distinct neural mechanisms that implement various kinds of expertise We broadly define expertise as skill in any perceptual cognitive social or motor domain with the common core being optimised information processing due to knowledge acquired from repeated experiences Thus we are interested in the full range of mental processes modulated or modified by expertise from simple object or pattern recognition to complex decision making or problem solving in a particular domain These domains can range from everyday or occupational expertise to sports and rather artificial domains such as board games In all cases the aim should be to elucidate how the brain implements these sometimes incredible feats We are particularly interested in connecting cognitive theories about expertise and expertise related performance differences with models and data on the neural implementation of expertise We welcome original research contributions using the full range of behavioural neuroscience methods as well as theoretical methodological or historical reviews and opinion papers focusing on any of the above mentioned aspects
