Abstract

Motivated by the pressing need to address environmental concerns, this paper undertakes a comparative analysis of environmental taxes in Ghana (policy adopter) and South Africa and Mauritius (policy pioneers). Results indicate that environmental taxes are major policy tools implemented in Ghana, South Africa and Mauritius to curb environmental degradation. Comparatively, environmental tax rates in Ghana are lower than those in South Africa and Mauritius. Polluters in Ghana pay three major tax burdens (tax rate for plastics, fuel, and diesel) as compared to four tax burdens (plastic container levy, MID levy on fossil fuels, vehicle ownership taxes, and environment protection fees) in Mauritius and six tax burdens (plastic bags, electricity generation, vehicle carbon emissions, carbon emissions from industrial processes, fuel and tyres) in South Africa. Environmental taxes in these three countries inherently adopt multi-dimensional approaches (internalisation of externalities, adherence to the polluter pays principle and generation of domestic revenues) towards broad economic objectives. As a contribution, this study provides pertinent information to African countries that are yet to adopt environmental taxes as a novel strategy to expand their fiscal space and curb environmental degradation.

1 Introduction

A general consensus emerging in the twenty-first century is the growth in environmental challenges (Hadjichambis & Reis 2020). Land degradation in Sub-Saharan Africa (SSA)'s arid regions is made worse by human activity, including some traditional coping mechanisms that are already detrimental to the region's overall food security (Mbene et al. 2023).

Tax Policy in Sub-Saharan Africa Zmarak M. Shalizi, Lyn Squire, Banco Mundial, 1988

Tax Policy in Sub-Saharan Africa Zmarak Shalizi, Lyn Squire, 1988 Trade is an essential driver for sustained economic growth and growth is necessary for poverty reduction In Sub Saharan Africa where three fourths of the poor live in rural areas spurring growth and generating income and employment opportunities is critical for poverty reduction strategies Seventy percent of the population lives in rural areas where livelihoods are largely dependent on the production and export of raw agricultural commodities such as coffee cocoa and cotton whose prices in real terms have been steadily declining over the past decades The deterioration in the terms of trade resulted for Africa in a steady contraction of its share in global trade over the past 50 years Diversification of agriculture into higher value non traditional exports is seen today as a priority for most of these countries Some African countries in particular Kenya South Africa Uganda Cote d'Ivoire Senegal and Zimbabwe have managed to diversify their agricultural sector into non traditional high value added products such as cut flowers and plants fresh and processed fruits and vegetables To learn from these experiences and better assist other African countries in designing and implementing effective agricultural growth and diversification strategies the World Bank has launched a comprehensive set of studies under the broad theme of Agricultural Trade Facilitation and Non Traditional Agricultural Export Development in Sub Saharan Africa This study provides an in depth analysis of the current structure and dynamics of the European import market for flowers and fresh horticulture products It aims to help client countries industry stakeholders and development partners to get a better understanding of these markets and to assess the prospects and opportunities they offer for Sub Saharan African exporters Tax Policy in Sub-Saharan Africa. A Framework for Analysis, 1989 Report on tax policy which strengthen the role of the price mechanism in allocating resources based on the existing tax structures of the countries of Sub Saharan Africa

Regional Integration in Sub-Saharan Africa Faezeh Foroutan, 1992 The emphasis of regional integration in Sub Saharan Africa should shift from the integration of goods markets to the regional coordination of macroeconomic and microeconomic policies the harmonization of administrative rules and regulations and the joint provision of public goods Such steps are likely to make Sub Saharan African markets more attractive to domestic and foreign investors and to improve economic growth

Tax Expenditures in Sub-Saharan Africa Todd Schneider, Sandhya Rajyam Garimella, Ms. Li Liu, Simon Naitram, Can Sever, Felix F. Simione, Irena Jankulov Suljagic, Qianqian Zhang, 2025-10-07 Tax expenditures in sub Saharan Africa SSA are less well understood than in other regions and in some cases represent a significant element of fiscal policy Tax expenditures involve provisions within tax systems that reduce tax liability relative to a benchmark and can include tax exemptions deductions credits or preferential rates and can impact revenue collection equity and governance This paper seeks to shed light on tax expenditures in sub Saharan Africa SSA draw attention to the presence of significant data gaps transparency and governance issues in the region and build on studies by other institutions and agencies It reviews how the IMF has engaged on this issue in recent years and highlights the importance of tax expenditures to macro fiscal stability in the current liquidity constrained environment It also offers some practical recommendations to policymakers and external stakeholders for advancing work in this area

The Politics of Africa's Economic Recovery Richard Sandbrook, 1993-04 The waning of the Cold War means that major political powers no longer feel compelled to support African authoritarianism Revised official consensus holds that in Africa as elsewhere political reform must accompany economic adjustment According to this view African recovery requires a reduction in the size and economic role of monopolistic and inefficient states and their transformation into accountable liberal democracies Is this a desirable and practicable political programme Certainly all over Africa the number of liberal democracies is growing But can they survive and are they compatible with renewed economic growth Richard Sandbrook answers these questions and assesses the feasibility of the new political programme in reinforcing Africa's economic recovery He argues that the programme has merit in the short term but in the longer term a more self-reliant state directed approach should be adopted to ensure prosperity and durable democracy in the region

From Bad Policy to Chaos in Somalia Jamil Mubarak, 1996-06-18 This examination of the economic policies of Somalia since 1970 is empirical in nature employing political and economic analysis economic theory and econometric techniques and argues that the governmental economic policy responses to crises and exogenous shocks have been bad for the long term economic growth of the country Despite significant foreign financed public investment economic growth has been weak and real per capita income has declined The intensifying economic crises contributed to the rapid deterioration of the political situation that led to the collapse of the Somali state in 1991 Since 1991 chaos and more destruction has followed as warlords scrambled for power resulting in the resource base of the economy being eroded further and the country being reduced to warring clans

The World Bank's Population Lending and Sector Review George B. Simmons, Rushikesh M. Maru, 1988 The Bank has established a population policy dialogue with governments and has successfully differentiated its population activities in different areas of the world But the Bank's efforts to translate population policy goals into effective programs and projects have been far from successful

The Coordinated Reform of Tariffs and Domestic Indirect Taxes Pradeep Mitra, 1990 Tariff reform for trade liberalization must be seen as part of a broader program of tax reform Custom duties on imports should be geared chiefly to protection Reductions in such duties to promote an outward oriented development strategy should be offset by increases in sales value added taxes applied equally to imports and domestic production That would maintain public revenues and avoid exacerbating macroeconomic difficulties
