

The Florentine paintings in Holland

1300-1500

Edited by H. W. van Os & Marian Prakken of the University of Groningen

All the early Florentine paintings in the public and private collections of the Netherlands

Among the belongings of the stadholder-king William III when he died in England in 1702 was a pair of the greatest Florentine portraits of the Renaissance. Although he had taken them over from James II, his successor Queen Anne had them sent to William's native country. In this way Holland acquired its first two Florentine paintings - Piero di Cosimo's portraits of Giuliano da Sangallo and his father (see cat. nos 38-39). Today they are hanging in the Rijksmuseum.

So little was known about Italian art in Holland, however, that the portraits were long thought to have been painted by Lucas van Leyden or Albert Dürer. Only towards the end of the 19th century did an Italian scholar identify them correctly.

It was not until our century that Dutch art historians began to devote serious attention to the Italian paintings in their own country. In the present publication their study of the early Florentines in Holland has come to fruition.

The museums and art collectors of the Netherlands have not been inactive either. Since 1702 more than 60 early Florentine paintings - including masterpieces by Fra Angelico, Lorenzo Monaco and Filippino Lippi - have found their way to Dutch collections. In this book they are all described, analysed and illustrated for the first time. The discussions, based on technical as well as art-historical investigation, are thorough and down to earth.

sharp challenge in Jill Burke's Changing Patrons a book that draws heavily upon the author's discoveries in Florentine archives tracing the many profound transformations in patrons' relations to the visual world of fifteenth century Florence. Looking closely at two of the city's upwardly mobile families Burke demonstrates that they approached the visual arts from within a grid of social, political, and religious concerns. Art for them often served as a mediator of social difference and a potent means of signifying status and identity. Changing Patrons combines visual analysis with history and anthropology to propose new interpretations of the art created by, among others, Botticelli, Filippino Lippi, and Raphael. Genuinely interdisciplinary, the book also casts light on broad issues of identity, power, relations, and the visual arts in Florence, the cradle of the Renaissance.

Art and Love in Renaissance Italy Metropolitan Museum of Art (New York, N.Y.), Kimbell Art Museum, 2008. Many famous artworks of the Italian Renaissance were made to celebrate love, marriage, and family. They were the pinnacles of a tradition dating from early in the era of commemorating betrothals, marriages, and the birth of children by commissioning extraordinary objects: maiolica, glassware, jewels, textiles, paintings that were often also exchanged as gifts. This volume is the first comprehensive survey of artworks arising from Renaissance rituals of love and marriage and makes a major contribution to our understanding of Renaissance art in its broader cultural context. The impressive range of works gathered in these pages extends from birth trays painted in the early fifteenth century to large canvases on mythological themes that Titian painted in the mid 1500s. Each work of art would have been recognized by contemporary viewers for its prescribed function within the private domestic domain.

BOOK JACKET Painting in Renaissance Siena, 1420-1500 Keith Christiansen, Laurence B. Kanter, Carl Brandon Strehlke, 1988. Catalog of an exhibition which opened at The Metropolitan Museum of Art on Dec 20, 1988. This first comprehensive study in English devoted to Sienese painting to be published in four decades centers on the fifteenth century, a fascinating but frequently neglected period when Sienese artists confronted the innovations of Renaissance painting in Florence. Two introductory essays survey fifteenth century Sienese painting and individual entries examine 139 key works in exhaustive detail, presenting new insights into long debated issues of interpretation and attribution and often utilizing previously unpublished material. Most of the major paintings are reproduced in color and supplemented with illustrations of related comparative works.
