

- A body of Christian literature, that understanding is the product of a long development.

A. The nature of the New Testament

Before the term "testament" was applied to a set of writing, it was referred to God's special dealing with human beings. In the story of the Hebrews and of Israel we hear of a covenant - (agreement or pact) by which God made a commitment to Noah; to Abraham and to David, promising special help or blessings. In the traditions, however, the most notable covenant was that which God made with Moses and Israel (Ex 19:5,10:27) whereby Israel become God's special people.

Almost 600 years before Jesus birth, at a moment when the Monarchy in Judah and Jerusalem was collapsing before foreign armies, Jerimiah reported an oracle of the Lord (Jer 31:31-33) new here has a connotation of "renewed" even though the renewed is not like the covenant made with their ancestors- and it may have had that force when first use by the believers in Jesus, as they echoed the language and ideals of Jerimiah (2Cor 3:6, Gal 4 :24-26).

Through the death and resurrection of Jesus, therefore Christians believed that God had renewed the covenant into a fresh dimension- hence that covenant reach beyond Israel to include gentile as God's people.

Nevertheless, the scripture of Israel remained the scripture for Christians.

New Testament was use by Christians for a body of their own writings, ultimately leading to that use of the designation O.T for the scripture of Israel. It took centuries of years before the Latin and Greek churches came to widely agree about adding the 27 narratives as a canonized collection.

- #### B. How the 1st Christian books were written, preserved and collected- oral tradition- pass on of stories, Jesus didn't produce a writing that contained his revelation. People did not write down because of the story eschological- the last time was near Marantha, 1 Cor 16:22 come lord Jesus Rev 20:20
