Leadership is an intensive role requirement for managers and a major reason why managerial jobs exist. This chapter examines findings from research on the nature of managerial work. The research involves analysis of data from a variety of sources, including observation of managers' activities, in which managers describe their own activities, interviews with managers who explain what they do and why they do it, and job descriptive questionnaires in which managers rate the importance of different types of managerial activities. One major purpose of this research has been to identify patterns of activity that are common to all types of managers. Another major response has been to compare activity patterns for different types of managers, or to analyse by different situations. Although "comparative" studies compare the extent to which the behaviour of a manager reflects the managerial requirements of the situation.
