International Hypoxia Symposia, 1979-2001

This issue of High Altitude Medicine & Biology contains the abstracts of the 12th International Hypoxia Symposium to be held at Jasper Park Lodge, Alberta, Canada, on March 10-14, 2001. Therefore, this is an opportune time to review these influential meetings, which have taken place on a regular basis for over 20 years.

The first of the long series of Symposia was held at the Banff Springs Hotel, Banff, Alberta, at the beginning of 1979. This magnificent hotel was built in 1928 by the Canadian Pacific Railroad in one of the grandest regions of the Canadian Rockies. The meeting was organized by one of the doyens of high altitude medicine, Charles Sneed Houston (1913-). Houston (Fig. 1) began climbing in the European Alps in 1925 (at the age of 12!), was a member of the first expedition to climb Nanda Devi (7817 m) in 1936, and took part in expeditions to K2 (8641 m) in 1938 and 1953. Much of his life has been spent educating mountaineers and trekkers about the medical problems of high altitude, and he played a pivotal role in the recognition of high altitude pulmonary edema in the English-speaking world.

The 1979 meeting had interesting predecessors. In 1973, Charles Houston together with Michael Ward organized a small meeting on mountain medicine at the Alpine Club in London. A somewhat larger meeting was held at Plas Y Brenin, Capel Curig, North Wales, in February 1975 on the topic of mountain medicine and physiology, and this resulted in a book (Clarke et al., 1975) that still makes entertaining reading. One of the participants was the legendary British climber H. W. Tilman, who had made the first ascent of Nanda Devi (7817 m) with Noel Odell in 1936 when Houston was a member of the expedition. Tilman had an entertaining style of writing, and in the chapter on nutrition he cited Dr. Johnson: "For I take it that he who will not mind his belly will scarcely mind anything else." Tilman went on to observe that on expeditions, one must steer a middle course:

On the one hand are the men—I quote Carlyle—"whose principal enjoyment is their dinner and who watch the sun rise with no other hope than that they shall fill their bellies before it sets"; and on the other hand the austere type, the genuine travellers who, according to the Spanish proverb, "should have the back of an ass to bear all and the mouth of a hog to eat whatever is set before him."

Following the meeting in 1975, two symposia were organized by Charles Houston in Yosemite National Park, California, in 1975 and 1976 under the titles Mountain Medicine I and II. These were sponsored by the Yosemite Institute. Two additional Symposia were held in Banff in 1976 and 1977, sponsored by the Arctic Institute of North America.

Although the International Hypoxia Symposia owe their origin to Charles Houston, his younger colleague John Robert Sutton (1941-1996) played a major role in the first nine Symposia (Table 1). John (Fig. 2) was an Australian who first met Charles Houston during the High Altitude Physiological Studies Program near Mt. Logan in the Canadian Yukon. John was a dynamo, and it was a great loss to the high altitude medicine community when he died of a heart attack in 1996 at the early age of 55. Other people who made major contributions to the organization of the Symposia included Geoffrey Coates, Norman L. Jones, and John E. Remmers.

Initially, the Symposia had a strong emphasis on educating trekkers and mountaineers in
