

SWELLING

Swelling occurs when the body responds to an injury (needle) with an inflammatory response, as it is the first step towards healing. Redness, heat, swelling, and pain are associated with this first stage. Redness and heat are caused by increased blood flow. Swelling is the result of the increased movement of fluid and white blood cells into the injured area.

HOW CAN WE REDUCE IT?

- Maintain hydration and drink plenty of water and juices.
- Consider taking herbal supplements such as arnica.
- Focus on eating fruits and vegetables.
- Avoid excess salt and process foods.
- Keep your head elevated to allow gravity to reduce the swelling.
- Consider taking antihistamine tablets (if advised by GP).
- Avoid sauna/steamrooms for 48 hours post treatment to keep swelling to a minimum.

Comyn, 2012-12-06 Polymers are permeable whilst ceramics glasses and metals are generally impermeable This may seem a disadvantage in that polymeric containers may allow loss or contamination of their contents and aggressive substances such as water will diffuse into polymeric structures such as adhesive joints or fibre reinforced composites and cause weakening However in some cases permeability is an advantage and one particular area where this is so is in the use of polymers in drug delivery systems Also without permeable polymers we would not enjoy the wide range of dyed fabrics used in clothing and furnishing The fundamental reason for the permeability of polymers is their relatively high level of molecular motion a factor which also leads to their high levels of creep in comparison with ceramics glasses and metals The aim of this volume is to examine some timely applied aspects of polymer permeability In the first chapter basic issues in the mathematics of diffusion are introduced and this is followed by two chapters where the fundamental aspects of diffusion in polymers are presented The following chapters then each examine some area of applied science where permeability is a key issue Each chapter is reasonably self contained and intended to be informative without frequent outside reference This inevitably leads to some repetition but it is hoped that this is not excessive
