SKELETAL SYSTEM

THE FRAMEWORK OF THE HUMAN BODY

Read the text below and then answer the questions.

The skeletal system, or skeleton, is made of bones, cartilage, ligaments, and ligaments. It is one of the most important parts of the human body. Its main function is to support the body and protect the internal organs. It also provides a framework for the muscles and ligaments. The skeleton is made of 206 bones in the adult human body. The skeletal system is a dynamic and interconnected network that adapts to the needs of the body.

Bones, the fundamental building blocks of the skeletal system, are made of a dense, hard material called bone. They are made of a complex of organic and inorganic materials. The organic materials, such as collagen, provide flexibility, while the inorganic materials, such as calcium, provide strength. The combination of these materials makes bones strong and flexible. This allows the skeleton to support the body's weight and protect the internal organs.

Cartilage, a flexible, non-bony connective tissue, plays a vital role in the skeletal system. It is found in the joints of bones, allowing smooth movement by reducing friction and absorbing shock. Cartilage is also found in the ends of long bones, where it provides a smooth surface for the bones to glide over. Ligaments, strong bands of connective tissue, connect the bones to each other, providing stability and support. They are made of a dense, fibrous material that can withstand a lot of tension.

The skeletal system is not a static structure. It is constantly changing and adapting to the needs of the body. Bones are made of a living tissue that can repair itself and grow new bone. This process is called bone remodeling. It is a continuous process that occurs throughout the life of the body. The skeletal system is also affected by hormones, which can increase or decrease bone density. This is why it is important to maintain a healthy diet and exercise regularly to keep the bones strong.
