

SYNCRETISM

Syncretism refers to the merging or blending of different belief systems, ideas, or cultural practices into a new hybrid form.

OVERVIEW

Syncretism often occurs when different cultures come into contact and interact with each other.

Syncretism can manifest in various aspects of life, such as religion, art, language, and social customs. It reflects the ability of human societies to adapt, evolve, and incorporate diverse influences, leading to the creation of unique and dynamic cultural expressions.

EXAMPLE

Mestizo Culture

Mestizo culture is a syncretism example because it is a blend of indigenous and European influences in modern-day Latin America. The term "mestizo" comes from the Spanish word for mixed, which refers to racial mixing. Their clothing, for example, has a distinctive indigenous aesthetic while using textiles that were introduced by the Spaniards.
