

We are looking for the proper value of  $n$  to minimize  $T_e(K_n, n)$ . We note in (23) that the value of  $3n^2 - 4n + 1$  is positive for all value of  $n$  where  $n \geq 1$ , so, by increasing the value of  $n$ ,  $T_e(K_n, n)$  will decrease. Therefore,  $T_e(K_n, n)$  will be minimal where  $n$  achieves its maximum value. It should be noted that the maximum value of  $n$  is  $n$ . By considering  $n=n$ , the value of  $n=n$  will be even and we can use the result value of (22) which is  $\frac{n-1}{2}$ .

3. CONCLUSION

In this paper, edge-tenacity of two classes of graphs are calculated. For calculating the edge-tenacity of these classes, first the function in conventional edge-tenacity formula, which is supposed to be minimized, is calculated for constant number of components. Second a function with respect to the number of components and the size of components. It is shown that the size of components is a constant value and the above function may be considered as a one-variable function. This variable is just the number of components. Finding minimum of this one-variable function is well known. Our approach may be useful for calculation of tenacity and toughness in various classes of graphs.
