The Triangle of Representation Christopher Prendergast, 2000 One of our best known cultural critics examines the concept of representation and its many and varied forms in literature and art

King Lear and the Naked Truth Judy Kronenfeld, 1998 Opening the play up to the implications of these contexts and this interpretive theory she reveals much about Lear English Reformation religious culture and the state of contemporary criticism

Who Killed Shakespeare Patrick Brantlinger, 2013-09-13 Who killed Shakespeare asks the world outside the university convinced that something's rotten in the state of academia Have English professors really tossed out the Bard to take up theory instead After public relations disasters surrounding political correctness deconstruction and the Social Text hoax it seems that everyone politicians parents and the press has something to say about what's wrong with the university Patrick Brantlinger argues that critiques of the university in ruins are misdirected Shakespeare English and the humanities in general are all being marginalized not by professors but by an increasingly corporatized and career oriented direction in higher education This provocative look inside the ivory tower is required reading for anyone who thinks he or she knows what's at stake in the modern university

The Historical Film Marcia Landy, 2001-01-01 This aims to show how media critics and historians have written about history as portrayed in cinema and television by historical films and documentaries focusing on what it means to read films historically and the colonial experience as shown in post colonial film

Inconsistency in the Torah Joshua A. Berman, 2017-06-12 Inconsistency in the Torah

Jesus and the Historians A. J. M. Wedderburn, 2010 Much has been written about the life of Jesus in works that often claim to be historical and to employ historical methods Yet only sometimes are the methods and the presuppositions involved made explicit However it has also been claimed more recently that a decisive change in our view of the nature of historical knowledge and methods has taken place in that the modern has given way to the postmodern After a survey of a number of books on Jesus that have raised the question of how his life should be studied historically Alexander J M Wedderburn starts by looking at such claims asking how new and how valid the insights involved in what claims to be a new historiographical epistemology in fact are before turning to look at a number of problems raised by recent studies of the life of Jesus that are relevant for the work of the historian the nature of the sources available to us and how to use them and the criteria and principles to employ the role played by the early Christian communities memories of Jesus and the extent to which this enhances their trustworthiness or gives reason for caution the extent to which the traditions about Jesus were transmitted orally and the implications of this for the reliability of these traditions and finally the questions how far we can investigate how Jesus understood his work and to what conclusions a historical study of this could lead us as well as the implications of this for christology
