Solar Terrestrial Predictions Volume 1 Proc:

Using Solar Radio Burst Integrated Fluxes to Predict Energetic Proton Flux Increases William R. Barron, 1982
Time integrated solar radio fluxes and their association with satellite observed solar energetic proton flux increases have been studied. The time integration was only of the U portion of the radio burst flux increase. The best correlations between the integrated radio fluxes and the proton peak fluxes were realized when the radio fluxes were multiplied by the factor $\exp 3B$ where B is the angular distance in radians between the site of the flare and the solar footpoint of the magnetic field connection between the sun and the earth. The solar footpoint positions were determined from the solar wind speed. Two variate linear regressions were computed using the time integrated radio fluxes at five discrete radio frequencies in the 606 to 8800 MHz frequency interval and peak proton fluxes at 10 MeV and 30 MeV. The higher frequencies of 2695, 4995 and 8800 MHz all correlated better with the 10 MeV protons than the lower frequencies. The 30 MeV protons were even better correlated with the higher frequencies but correlation with the lower frequencies were poorer. The Total Energy Density $E_{\text{sub T}}$ of the radio burst an integration across the frequency interval of the time integrated radio fluxes at each frequency was found to be better correlated with the proton fluxes than any of the individual frequencies. Scientific and Technical Aerospace Reports, 1991. Lists citations with abstracts for aerospace related reports obtained from world wide sources and announces documents that have recently been entered into the NASA Scientific and Technical Information Database.

Science of Space Environment Tadanori Ondoh, Katsuhide Marubashi, 2001. Antenna Handbook Y.T. Lo, S. W. Lee, 2013-06-29. Techniques based on the method of modal expansions, the Rayleigh-Stevenson expansion in inverse powers of the wavelength and also the method of moments solution of integral equations are essentially restricted to the analysis of electromagnetic radiating structures which are small in terms of the wavelength. It therefore becomes necessary to employ approximations based on high frequency techniques for performing an efficient analysis of electromagnetic radiating systems that are large in terms of the wavelength. One of the most versatile and useful high frequency techniques is the geometrical theory of diffraction (GTD) which was developed around 1951 by J. B. Keller. 1, 2, 3. A class of diffracted rays are introduced systematically in the GTD via a generalization of the concepts of classical geometrical optics (GO). According to the GTD these diffracted rays exist in addition to the usual incident, reflected and transmitted rays of GO. The diffracted rays in the GTD originate from certain localized regions on the surface of a radiating structure such as at discontinuities in the geometrical and electrical properties of a surface and at points of grazing incidence on a smooth convex surface as illustrated in Fig. 1. In particular the diffracted rays can enter into the GO shadow as well as the lit regions. Consequently the diffracted rays entirely account for the fields in the shadow region where the GO rays cannot exist Solar System Update Philippe Blondel, John Mason, 2006-08-23 This book the first in a series of forthcoming volumes consists of topical and timely reviews of a number of carefully selected topics in solar system science Contributions in form of up to date reviews are mainly aimed at professional astronomers and planetary scientists wishing to inform themselves about progress in fields closely related to their own field of expertise Handbook of Geophysics and Space Environments U.S. Air Force Geophysics Laboratory, 1985 Biological Effects and Physics of Solar and Galactic Cosmic Radiation Part B Charles E. Swenberg, Gerda Horneck, E.G. Stassinopoulous, 2012-12-06 Space missions subject human beings or any other target of a spacecraft to a radiation environment of an intensity and composition not available on earth Whereas for missions in low earth orbit LEO such as those using the Space Shuttle or Space Station scenario radiation exposure guidelines have been developed and have been adopted by spacefaring agencies for exploratory class missions that will take the space travellers outside the protective confines of the geomagnetic field sufficient guidelines for radiation protection are still outstanding For a piloted Mars mission the whole concept of radiation protection needs to be reconsidered Since there is an increasing interest of many nations and space agencies in establishing a lunar base and for exploring Mars by manned missions it is both timely and important to develop appropriate risk estimates and radiation protection guidelines which will have an influence on the design and structure of space vehicles and habitation areas of the extraterrestrial settlements This book is the result of a multidisciplinary effort to assess the state of art in our knowledge on the radiation situation during deep space missions and on the impact of this complex radiation environment on the space traveller It comprises the lectures by the faculty members as well as short contributions by the students given at the NATO Advanced Study Institute Biological Effects and Physics of Solar and Galactic Cosmic Radiation held in Armacao de Pera Portugal 12-23 October 1991 Report Upper Atmosphere Geophysics, 1982-02
