

Step 1:

Bill is drafted.

Step 2:

Bill is introduced.

Step 3:

The Bill goes to committee. Members of the committee may hold hearings to better understand the implications of the bill, and the bill may be considered "dead" if the committee does not act on the bill.

Step 4:

The Subcommittee considers the bill. Subcommittees have specializations on a certain topic and may decide to conduct their own studies and hold their own hearings. The subcommittee must hold a vote to refer a bill back to the full committee.

Step 8:

The bill passes both chambers of Congress goes to the president. Once the president signs the bill, it becomes law. If the President vetoes a bill, Congress may attempt to override the veto. If both chambers of Congress pass the bill again by a two-thirds majority, the bill becomes law.

Step 7:

The bill is passed and sent to the other chamber. The bill follows the same route through committees and finally to the floor. The chamber may approve the bill as received, reject it, ignore it, or change it. Congress may form a conference committee to resolve differences between the House and Senate versions of the bill. The bill dies if the conference committee is unable to reach an agreement. If the conference committee reaches an agreement, the House and Senate vote to approve a conference report.

Step 6:

The full chamber votes on the bill. There is additional debate about the bill, and the full chamber must vote to approve any amendments. The bill is then passed or defeated by the members voting.

Step 5:

The Committee marks up the bill. Committee members may propose amendments to the bill and must vote to refer a bill back to the full chamber of Congress.

Democracy in International Law-Making Salar Abbasi,2021-12-20
This book provides a critique of current international law making and draws on a set of principles from Persian philosophers to present an alternative to influence the development of international law making procedure The work conceptualizes a substantive notion of democracy in order to regulate international law making mechanisms under a set of principles developed between the twelfth and seventeenth centuries in Persia What the author here names democratic egalitarian multilateralism is founded on the idea of egalitarian law by Suhrawardi the account of substantial motion by Mulla Sadra and the ideal of intercultural dialectical democracy developed by R m Following a discussion of the conceptual flaws of the chartered and customary sources of international law it is argued that democratic egalitarian multilateralism could be a source for a set of principles to regulate the procedures through which international treaties are made as well as a criterion for customary international law ascertainment Presenting an alternative drawn from a less dominant culture to the established ideas of international law making the book will be essential reading for researchers and academics working in public international law history of law legal theory comparative legal theory Islamic law and history
