The Economics Principles of Confucius and His School Chen Huan-Chang, 2003-03-01

The Economic Principles of Confucius and His School is a unique work The author Chen Huan Chang was a civil servant in the last years of the Qing Empire After a traditional education in classical Chinese Chen befriended and became a student of the great reforming scholar and leader Kang Yu wei who deepened and broadened his knowledge of Confucianism Finally he went to the USA and took a Ph D in economics at Columbia University studying with such noted names as Edwin Seligman and John Bates Clark producing his Ph D and this book in the very year of the collapse of the Chinese Empire 1911 Uniquely Chen was trained in both classical and reformist Chinese schools and Western economic thought It is from this perspective that he produced The Economic Principles of Confucius and His School a meticulous comparison and contrasting of classical Chinese and classical Western economic doctrines His reformist position means that he does not automatically defend Chinese doctrines yet he considers them to be strong and important and does not advocate their replacement with Western models of thought as some other Chinese reformers of his day did This two volume work gives an extremely detailed account of economic thinking in China before the 1911 Revolution Chen includes not only the Confucians but also accounts of Daoist Mohist Legalist and many other schools Even today no other study of this depth has ever been produced in English and much of what Chen describes is still highly relevant in modern times      The Economic Principles of Confucius and His School Chen Huan-Chang,1911

can read these pages without becoming convinced that Confucianism is a great economic as well as a great moral and religious system and that it contains most if not all of the elements necessary to the solution of the serious problems that confront China today. That these problems may be speedily and happily solved and that Dr Chen may take the prominent and distinguished part in the reformation of his country for which his high character and unusual attainments so well fit him is the earnest hope of his American friends.

Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1911 edition. Excerpt: BOOK IV CONSUMPTION CHAPTER XII General Principles Of Consumption 1 Human Wants All founders of religions turn their attention to God but Confucius turns his to man. In the Evolution of Civilization he says Man is the product of the attributes of Heaven and Earth by the interaction of the dual forces of nature: the union of the animal and intelligent souls and the finest subtle matter of the five elements. By this statement he means that man is a spiritual being. Again he says Man is the heart and mind of Heaven and Earth and the visible embodiment of the five elements. He lives in the enjoyment of all flavors, the discriminating of all notes of harmony and the enrobing of all colors. 2 By this passage Confucius means that man is also a material being. He takes the feelings of man as the basis of his philosophy. Or as Confucius himself puts it: The sage cultivates the feelings of man as the fields so that man regards the sage as the landlord. Now what are the feelings of man? According to Confucius man has seven feelings which are given to him by nature and not by learning: namely joy, anger, sadness, fear, love, hatred, and desire. 4 The last one, desire or want, is the strongest of all. Confucius says: For food and drink and sexual pleasure there is the greatest desire of man; against death and poverty there is the greatest hatred of man. Thus desire and hatred are the two great elements in the mind of man. 1 Li Ki bk vii p 380 Ibid p 382 Ibid p 384 Ibid p 379. In fact, Confucianism is more human than any other religion. Mankind is the object of its teaching. Human feeling is the field of its work. Since desire is the strongest feeling of man, no matter how spiritual he may be, the
