The Economics Of Electricity Supply In Australia:

The Economics of Electricity Supply in Australia G. D. McColl, 1976 The Economics of the Gas Supply Industry Malcolm Abbott, 2016-05-12 In recent years natural gas has become a major source of energy with trade across borders increasing through both pipelines and as Liquefied Natural Gas LNG Owing to this global development this book traces the development of the gas supply industry from localised to national industries and national industries to a major global industry It looks at the basic economics and origins of the industry as well as the role of the government in its development and relation to international markets The book highlights certain economic characteristics such as the industry's vertical and horizontal structure the composition of consumer demand and the role of government in safety planning and investment With the understanding of the industry's long term development the book helps to illustrate the relationship between natural gas producers and importers of LNG This book would be of interest to scholars majoring in resource economics and energy economics as well as to international practitioners in the natural gas market Electrical Engineer of Australia & New Zealand, 1928 Utilities Reform in Twenty-First Century Australia Malcolm Abbott, Bruce Cohen, 2021 The book traces the development and consequences of the economic reform measures undertaken in the utilities sector in Australia communications energy water wastewater services and transport in the last years of the 20th century and early decades of the 21st century Privatization and Restructuring of Electricity Provision Daniel Czamanski, 1999-04-30 Before the energy crisis of the 1970s electricity provision was a non issue the world over but the crisis of 1973 induced policymakers worldwide to consider private and restructured electricity provision as an alternative to unified publicly and privately owned systems Czamanski examines arguments and experiences concerning the divestiture of state owned enterprises in a variety of political and technological contexts He also considers restructuring under the Thatcher government in Great Britain the reforms drafted by Czamanski in Israel and restructuring in the United States as well as events in Norway the Pacific Rim Canada and the developing countries In addition he considers the advantages and disadvantages of privatizing through theoretical discussion and by exploring experiences in various countries The Economics of Decarbonizing Electricity Production Gregor Schwerhoff, 2024-10-04 Electricity production is the sector with the largest share of global emissions and there are many options for decarbonizing it Identifying the lowest cost option for achieving decarbonization and full reliability is a complex optimization problem at the intersection of economics and engineering Key determinants are the cost of individual technologies the geographical potential the complementarities between energy sources and supporting infrastructure like electricity grids and energy storage This paper reviews the literature on the subject and draws high level conclusions from the abundance of specialized analyses It finds that energy economy models have strongly changed projections of the optimal electricity mix in recent years While the models differ in detail models project that the share of renewable energy mostly solar and wind power increases steadily in a below 2 C scenario and becomes the dominant source of energy by 2050 An electricity system based on solar and wind power can use flexibility options as a complement instead of baseload energy Models vary by the degree to which renewable energy is supported by carbon capture and storage bioenergy and nuclear energy

The Economics of Australian Industry Alex Hunter,1963 Energy and the Australian Economy Peter J. Brain, Gerard P. Schuyers, Cosima McPhee,1981 The Cambridge Handbook of Social Sciences in Australia Ian McAllister, Steve Dowrick, Riaz Hassan,2003-08-07 First published in 2003 The Cambridge Handbook of Social Sciences in Australia is a high quality reference on significant research in Australian social sciences The book is divided into three main sections covering the central areas of the social sciences economics political science and sociology Each section examines the significant research in the field placing it within the context of broader debates about the nature of the social sciences and the ways in which institutional changes have shaped how they are defined taught and researched

Transforming Power Aynsley Kellow,1996 Originally published in 1996 this book is an exploration and analysis of the electricity industry in the context of uncertainty following the energy crisis of the 1970s and concern over the greenhouse effect Few industries demand a similar level of foresight and planning or such vast amounts of capital The book examines five well known Australian Canadian and New Zealand cases and closely analyses the ways in which various agencies have sought ends to serve the means at their disposal Electricity has long been regarded as a natural monopoly but questions of privatisation regulation and government control are increasingly prevalent The book explores these issues and also notes the experiences of other countries in its analysis of institutional reform Aynsley Kellow argues for different approaches to electricity planning which offer much by way of economic savings and minimisation of environmental problems
