Youth W. B. Yeats, 2016-01-11 My first memories are fragmentary and isolated and contemporaneous as though one remembered vaguely some early day of the Seven Days It seems as if time had not yet been created for all are connected with emotion and place and without sequence I remember sitting upon somebody s knee looking out of a window at a wall covered with cracked and falling plaster but what wall I do not remember and being told that some relation once lived there I am looking out of another window in London It is at Fitzroy Road Some boys are playing in the road and among them a boy in uniform a telegraph boy perhaps When I ask who the boy is a servant tells me that he is going to blow the town up and I go to sleep in terror After that come memories of Sligo where I live with my grandparents I am sitting on the ground looking at a mastless toy boat with the paint rubbed and scratched and I say to myself in great melancholy it is further away than it used to be and while I am saying it I am looking at a long scratch in the stern for it is especially the scratch which is further away Then one day at dinner my great uncle William Middleton says we should not make light of the troubles of children They are worse than ours because we can see the end of our trouble and they can never see any end and I feel grateful for I know that I am very unhappy and have often said to myself when you grow up never talk as grown up people do of the happiness of childhood I may have already had the night of misery when having prayed for several days that I might die I had begun to be afraid that I was dying and prayed that I might live There was no reason for my unhappiness Nobody was unkind and my grandmother has still after so many years my gratitude and my reverence The house was so big that there was always a room to hide in and I had a red pony and a garden where I could wander and there were two dogs to follow at my heels one white with some black spots on his head and the other with long black hair all over him I used to think about God and fancy that I was very wicked and one day when I threw a stone and hit a duck in the yard by mischance and broke its wing I was full of wonder when I was told that the duck would be cooked for dinner and that I should not be punished Harper's New Monthly Magazine ,1850 The Cottage Gardener ,1852 Journal of Horticulture and Practical Gardening ,1852
