Imperial Co-histories Julie F. Codell, 2003

This book explores the creation of imperial identities in Britain and several of its colonies: South Africa, India, Australia, Wales, and the ways in which the Victorian press around the world shaped and reflected these identities. The concept of co-histories, borrowed from Edward Said and Frantz Fanon, helps explain how the press shaped the imperial and national identities of Britain and of the colonies into co-histories that were thoroughly intertwined and symbiotic. Exploring a variety of press media, this book argues that the press was a site of resistance and revision by colonized authors and publishers, as well as a force of colonial authority for the British government, editors, and publishers who projected a view of the empire to their British colonial and colonized readers. Topics include The Journal of Indian Art and Industry, produced by the British art schools in India; women's periodicals; Indian writers in the British press; The Imperial Gazetteer, published in Scotland; the rise of telegraphic news agencies; the British press's images of China; seen through exhibitions of its art the Tory periodical Blackwood's Magazine and the Imperial Press Conference of 1909 rotational kinematics just like linear kinematics is descriptive and does not represent laws of nature with kinematics we can describe many things to great precision but kinematics does not consider causes for example a large angular acceleration describes a very rapid change in angular velocity without any consideration of its cause evaluate problem solving strategies for rotational kinematics just by using our intuition we can begin to see how rotational quantities like  $\theta$   $\omega$  and  $\alpha$  are related to one another for example if a motorcycle wheel has a large angular acceleration for a fairly long time it ends up spinning rapidly and rotates through many revolutions
