The State of the Language Philip Howard, 1985 Is the English language in decline Many people seem to think so but Philip Howard isn't one of them The Literary Editor of The Times of London Howard takes a robust commonsensical view of the changes that are happening in English His is not the Panglossian attitude that all is necessarily for the best in the best of all possible languages but he does feel that change is necessary and healthy in any living language Howard here examines the language in its various branches and categories such as grammar and pronunciation spelling and punctuation dialect and slang He discusses the effect the new technologies from cable TV to photocomposition are having on the mother tongue and he examines the new dialects that are coming into use He navigates the back streets of euphemism and the broad boring boulevards of cliché He asks whether the language is actually changing as fast as we suppose and if so why Howard argues that as far as we can we should strive to direct and control the changes in English in ways that increase its power And where we can't help it he says we should lie back and enjoy its immense richness which is unrivaled by any other language Rather than have us wring our hands Philip Howard entreats us with his customary wit and erudition to use our tongues in concert with our brains About the Author Philip Howard is the author of New Words for Old Weasel Words Words Fail Me and most recently A Word in Your Ear South Australian, 1978 Index to Australian Book Reviews, 1974 Includes entries supplied by University of Queensland Library Staff Australian/New Zealand Literature in the Pennsylvania State University Libraries Nan Bowman Albinski, 1989 Australian Books, 1973

The club is led by Henry Winter, a brilliant and charismatic young man. Henry is obsessed with Greek mythology and philosophy, and he quickly draws Richard into his world. The other members of the Classics Club are equally as fascinating. Bunny Corcoran is a wealthy and spoiled young man who is always looking for a good time. Charles Tavis is a quiet and reserved young man who is deeply in love with Henry. Camilla Macaulay is a beautiful and intelligent young woman who is drawn to the power and danger of the Classics Club. The students are all deeply in love with Morrow, and they are willing to do anything to please him. Morrow is a complex and mysterious figure, and he seems to be manipulating the students for his own purposes. As the students become more involved with Morrow, they begin to commit increasingly dangerous acts. The Secret History is an exceptional and gripping novel that will keep you guessing until the very end. The novel is a cautionary tale about the dangers of obsession and the power of evil.
