Songhay Benin Burkina Faso Mali Niger:

Language and Development in Africa H. Ekkehard Wolff, 2016-05-26 Development is based on communication through language. With more than two thousand languages being used in Africa, language becomes a highly relevant factor in all sectors of political, social, cultural, and economic life. This important sociolinguistic dimension hitherto remains underrated and under researched in Western mainstream development studies. The book discusses the resourcefulness of languages both local and global in view of the ongoing transformation of African societies as much as for economic development. From a novel applied African sociolinguistics perspective, it analyses the continuing effects of linguistic imperialism on postcolonial African societies in particular regarding the educational sector through imposed hegemonic languages such as Arabic and the ex-colonial languages of European provenance. It offers a broad interdisciplinary scientific approach to the linguistic dimensions of sociocultural modernisation and economic development in Africa, written for both the non-linguistically trained reader as much as for the linguistically trained researcher and language practitioner.

The Sociolinguistics of Development in Africa Paulin G. Djité, 2008 This book is an analysis of modernisation informed by the place of language in education, health, the economy, and governance in the African context. It paints a wide canvas of Africa in its different facets and shows how language is used as an instrument to deny access to socioeconomic and political emancipation.

International Encyclopedia of Linguistics William Frawley, 2003-05 The International Encyclopedia of Linguistics 2nd Edition encompasses the full range of the contemporary field of linguistics, including historical, comparative, formal, mathematical, functional, and philosophical linguistics, with special attention given to interrelations within branches of linguistics and to relations of linguistics with other disciplines. Areas of intersection with the social and behavioral sciences, ethnolinguistics, sociolinguistics, psycholinguistics, and behavioral linguistics receive major coverage, along with interdisciplinary work in language and literature, mathematical linguistics, computational linguistics, and applied linguistics. Longer entries in the International Encyclopedia of Linguistics ranging up to four thousand words survey the major fields of study, for example, anthropological linguistics, history of linguistics, semantics, and phonetics. Shorter entries treat specific topics within these fields, such as code switching, sound symbolism, and syntactic features. Other short entries define and discuss technical terms used within the various subfields or provide sketches of the careers of important scholars in the history of linguistics, such as Leonard Bloomfield, Roman Jakobson, and Edward Sapir. A major portion of the work is its extensive coverage of languages and language families. From those as familiar as English, Japanese, and the Romance languages to Hittite, Yoruba, and Nahuatl, all corners of the world receive treatment. Languages that are the subject of independent entries are analyzed in terms of their phonology, grammatical features, syntax, and writing systems. Lists attached to each article on a language group or family enumerate all languages extinct or still spoken within that group and provide detailed information on the number of known speakers, geographical range, and degree of intelligibility with other languages in the group. In this way, virtually every known language receives coverage For ease of reference and to aid research the articles are alphabetically arranged each signed by the contributor supported by up to date bibliographies line drawings maps tables and diagrams and readily accessible via a system of cross references and a detailed index and synoptic outline Authoritative comprehensive and innovative the 2nd edition of the International Encyclopedia of Linguistics will be an indispensable addition to personal public academic and research libraries and will introduce a new generation of readers to the complexities and concerns of this field of study

experiencing high levels of illiteracy under education and overt or covert discrimination The basic rights of such communities need protection and promotion There is however a danger of generalizing about minorities and forgetting the complexity of their social composition including the rural poor urban migrants older people women and children These groups may be considered as doubly vulnerable What makes their situation particularly problematic is that there is often a deliberate political policy on the part of majorities and states not to give due regard to the legitimate interests of minorities while members of minorities see their identity as central to their social and economic situation They are often excluded from political power and decision making in the development process without equal opportunities to secure a better quality of life One further danger may lie in regarding ethnicities as fixed rather than as the potentially fluid phenomena that they often are Situational ethnicity does occur and individuals and groups do modify their self identifications depending on circumstances Please note that the terminology in the fields of minority rights and indigenous peoples rights has changed over time MRG strives to reflect these changes as well as respect the right to self identification on the part of minorities and indigenous peoples At the same time after over 50 years work we know that our archive is of considerable interest to activists and researchers Therefore we make available as much of our back catalogue as possible while being aware that the language used may not reflect current thinking on these issues
