

Indigenous Structures

Indigenous structures are homes that have been built by the traditional tribes that have lived in South Africa for thousands of years. These structures were built using natural materials that could be found in the local environment, like stone, mud, wood and grass.

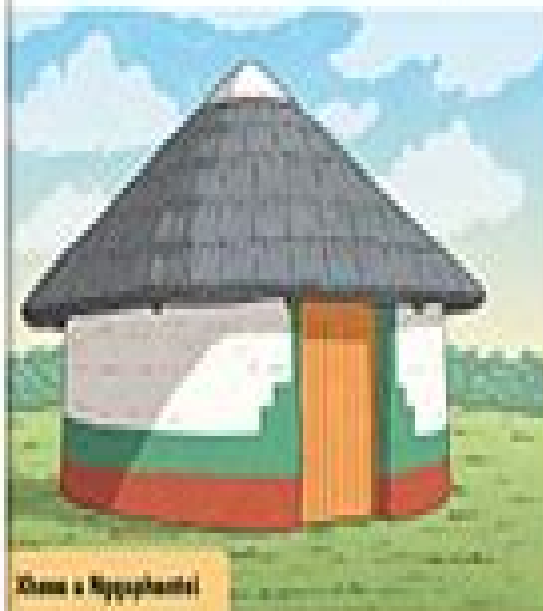

Although traditional building methods are not used very much in the city, they are still used today in some rural areas. Traditional homes of the Zulu, Xhosa and the Ndebele are still to be found in these areas.

The construction of the traditional home was important not only to serve as a shelter but also to look good. A traditional home was a source of pride for the owner.

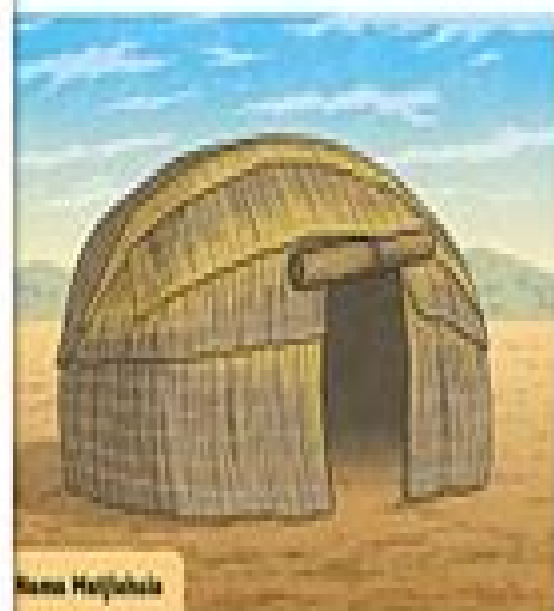

Zulu Hqibwenes

These hut-like-shaped houses begin construction with a frame made from flexible young trees that are bent and held in place with sticks made from bent trees. It is then thatched with long grass woven in place on the frame. The frame is made of clay or mud, which are not hard and may be polished to a shiny finish using a polishing stone. This type of hut is very stable against even strong storms. In winter it is warm and in summer cool. The smoke from the fire, in the centre of the room, escapes out the door or through the thatch. The smoke ensures that the thatch is kept free from houses are made using a method known as wattle and daub, which is a popular building method still used today. Wattle poles are used to construct a double-walled frame. Reeds, grass, reeds or clay are used to fill between the two wattle frames to create a solid wall. The wall is then plastered with daub, which is a mix of clay and dry grass. The roof is a cone of wooden poles that are then thatched. The Nqophantla had a doorway and people had to bend down to enter it.

Ndebele Mafubula

The mafubula is similar to the Zulu hqibwenes. It is also a similar shape to the hqibwenes and starts with a frame made from sapling branches, secured with sticks made from bent trees. The frame is covered with mud woven from natural materials. These houses were designed to be light in weight and easy to disassemble so they could be moved to a new location when the owner moved with the herd. The huts are well suited for the hot, dry climate of the Northern Cape. The mud that covers the frame allows a light and air, without allowing the wind to blow through. Although it has not often rained in this area when it does the sticks used to make the walls swell up. This makes the walls waterproof, which keeps the inside of the hut dry. In winter, the Northern Cape can get very cold at night. The interior walls were lined with animal skins to insulate them. Although the Ndebele people still build these huts, they make use of building materials

At a strategic time in South Africa s history the Christian history which is absolutely basic to all developments is presented in a comprehensive and objective way Too little attention is given to the influence of religion in socio political accounts This is a creative and much needed contribution to scholarship and general knowledge An outstanding work Dean S Gilliland Fuller Theological Seminary     Racial Segregation and the Origins of Apartheid in South Africa, 1919-36 Saul Dubow,1989-07-03

Based on extensive archival research in South Africa and drawing on the most recent scholarship this book is an original and lucid exposition of the ideological political and administrative origins of Apartheid It will add substantially to the understanding of contemporary South Africa     Transloyalties, Connected Histories and World Christianity during the Interwar Period Frieder Ludwig,Ellen Vea Rosnes,Joar Haga,Marina Xiaojing Wang,Jairzinho Lopes Pereira,2025-06-30

This book introduces the approach of transloyalties to study connected histories in World Christianity The term transloyalties is used to analyze the multifaceted processes in various contact zones through which cultural and religious identities were transformed in the tension between different loyalties The volume tests this approach in various case studies most of them focusing on Lutheran churches and World Lutheranism between 1919 and 1939 a time of rapidly changing political circumstances Traditionally the United States Germany and Scandinavia had been identified as the three centers of Lutheranism However while the structures in these centers were well established and World Lutheranism was something out there with limited impact back home negotiation processes on Lutheran identity were crucial in contexts where new Lutheran churches emerged Asian and African church leaders operated in a new context of loyalties They pushed for cooperation and they often interacted with mission organizations from all three centers and also with other religions traditional cultures and political movements Therefore it is significant what happened for instance in the Lutheran Church of China or at Umphumulo in South Africa Including theoretical reflections and case studies this volume is valuable reading for scholars of the history of World Christianity
