The Energy Industry And Global Warming New Roles For International Aid:

The Energy Industry and Global Warming Dennis Anderson,1992 Trade and Sustainable Development DIANE Publishing Company,1994-07 Forum for Applied Research and Public Policy ,1993 Selling Solar Damian Miller,2012-05-04 To solve the climate crisis the world must make a wholesale shift to renewable energy technologies With surging growth in emerging markets this transformation takes on even greater urgency The challenges and opportunities are immense Selling Solar considers how such a shift might happen Focusing on the case of solar photovoltaics it shows how at the start of the 21st century this promising technology began to diffuse rapidly in select emerging markets after years of struggling to take off What were the initial barriers to diffusion How were they overcome Who did it And how can this success be replicated Drawing on literature on innovation diffusion and entrepreneurship the author answers these questions showing how entrepreneurs affected profound technological change not just through the solar systems they sold but through the example they set to both new market entrants and policymakers In analysing how this happened this book offers important lessons for the diffusion of a range of renewable energy technologies in emerging markets and for the advancement of the sector as a whole Selling Solar is essential reading for anyone who believes in a renewable energy future and wants it sooner rather than later State of the World, 1993 Lester Russell Brown,1993 New Renewable Energy Resources World Energy Council,1994 Renewable energy is seen by some as the only hope for the survival of the planet yet by others it is viewed as a marginal resource with limited potential All too often however the facts behind the role that renewable energy can and will play in the future global energy scene are disguised or ignored as rival camps distort the evidence to suit their own objectives Energy Efficiency and Conservation in the Developing World World Bank,1993 There is a congruence of several forces in the developing world that makes very timely the formulation of a strategy to address energy efficiency and conservation issues better Many countries are becoming receptive to reforming the way energy is produced and consumed as they experience a rapidly growing demand for energy b major constraints on available energy financing c increased pressures to sustain the environment d poor energy sector performance and unsatisfied customers and e a reappraisal of the roles of government and of the public and private sectors in development These factors are forcing developing countries to address long neglected issues of energy wastage in production and end use The World Bank now has an enhanced opportunity to further assist developing countries to improve their energy efficiency and conservation policies and practices The paper provides a background on the evolution of developed versus developing country energy efficiency and summarizes World Bank experience It outlines the growing energy demand in developing countries and the accompanying financial and environmental problems that bring energy efficiency issues to the forefront The paper then sets out the potential for improved energy efficiency and the main reasons that efficiency has been so poor Finally it summarizes the priority actions for achieving energy efficiency in developing countries and sets out a four point program for the World Bank Green Jobs Created by Global Warming Initiatives United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Environment and Public Works, 2013 Climate Change Law in China in Global Context Xiangbai He, Hao Zhang, Alexander Zahar, 2020-05-31 In Climate Change Law in China in Global Context seven climate change law scholars explain how the country's legal system is gradually being mobilized to support the reduction of greenhouse gas emissions in China and achieve adaptation to climate change There has been little English scholarship on the legal regime for climate change in China This volume addresses this gap in the literature and focuses on recent attempts by the country to build defences against the impacts of climate change and to meet the country's international obligations on mitigation The authors are not only interested in China's laws on paper rather the book explains how these laws are implemented and integrated in practice and sheds light on China's current laws laws in preparation the changing standing of law relative to policy and the further reforms that will be necessary in response to the 2015 Paris Agreement on Climate Change This comprehensive and critical account of the Chinese legal system's response to the pressures of climate change will be an important resource for scholars of international law environmental law and Chinese law

World Development Report, 1992 This is the fifteenth in the annual series assessing major development issues The World Development Report 1992 explores the links between economic development and the environment The 1990 report on poverty last year's report on development strategies and this report constitute a trilogy on the goals and means of development The main message of this year's report is the need to integrate environmental considerations into development policymaking The report argues that continued and even accelerated economic and human development is sustainable and can be consistent with improving environmental conditions but that this will require major policy program and institutional shifts A twofold strategy is required First the positive links between efficient income growth and the environment need to be aggressively exploited Second strong policies and institutions need to be put in place which cause decision makers to adopt less damaging forms of behavior Where tradeoffs exist between income growth and environmental quality the report argues for a careful assessment of the costs and benefits of alternative policies This approach will result in much less environmental damage Like its predecessors this report includes the World Development Indicators which offer selected social and economic statistics on 125 countries

The Economics of Climate Change in China Fan Gang, Nicholas Stern, Ottmar Edenhofer, Xu Shanda, Klas Eklund, Frank Ackerman, Lailai Li, Karl Hallding, 2013-09-13 China faces many modernization challenges but perhaps none is more pressing than that posed by climate change China must find a new economic growth model that is simultaneously environmentally sustainable can free it from its dependency on fossil fuels and lift living standards for the majority of its population But what does such a model look like And how can China best make the transition from its present macro economic structure to a low carbon future This ground breaking economic study led by the Stockholm Environment Institute and the Chinese Economists 50 Forum brings together leading international thinkers in economics climate change and development to tackle some of the most challenging issues relating to China's low carbon development This study maps out a deep carbon reduction scenario and analyzes economic policies that shift carbon use and shows how China can take strong and decisive action to make deep reductions in carbon emission over the next forty years while maintaining high economic growth and minimizing adverse effects of a low carbon transition Moreover these reductions can be achieved within the finite global carbon budget for greenhouse gas emissions as determined by the hard constraints of climate science The authors make the compelling case that a transition to a low carbon economy is an essential part of China's development and modernization Such a transformation would also present opportunities for China to improve its energy security and move its economy higher up the international value chain They argue that even in these difficult economic times climate change action may present more opportunities than costs Such a transformation for China and the rest of the world will not be easy But it is possible necessary and worthwhile to pursue

The role of carbon markets in preventing dangerous climate change Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Environmental Audit Committee, 2010-02-08 Emissions trading is central to the Government's efforts to reduce greenhouse gas emissions in the UK This inquiry examines the prospects for a global carbon market and the implications of this for further development of the European Union Emissions Trading System EU ETS It reviews the impact and future prospects for the EU ETS in meeting the Government's twin objectives of reducing emissions at lowest cost and setting a carbon price that delivers investment in low carbon technologies The EU ETS has emissions caps set too high to force emitters to make the often costly investment decisions which would reduce emissions The recession has only served to loosen what little constraint the cap provided The carbon price has been too low to encourage the necessary investment in low carbon processes and infrastructure The cap mechanism therefore needs to be significantly tightened This should be supported by cancelling new entrant reserve allowances and auctioning as many allowances as possible rather than giving them away for free with the revenues possibly hypothecated to climate change measures The Government should explore the possible use of a carbon tax It should also encourage more use of allowance auctions with reserve prices more use of incentives for low carbon power generation and emissions performance standards for electricity generation The emphasis should also be on harmonising the approach internationally and on extending effective emissions trading systems The Committee lists 19 conclusions and recommendations
