Good of Education? Stephen Machin,Anna Vignoles,2005-05-08 Volumes have been written about the value of more and better education But is there sufficient evidence to support the commonly held belief that we as individuals and as a community should be investing more in education This book explores that question in unprecedented detail drawing on empirical evidence from an impressive array of sources While much of the focus is on the educational system in the United Kingdom the book offers lessons of international applicability A state of the art compendium on education policy and its impact on educational attainment the book examines numerous large scale data sources on individual pupils and schools The questions the book considers are far ranging How much do teachers matter for children s educational attainment What payoff do people get from acquiring more education when they enter the labor market How well do education systems function to provide employers with the skills they want The book concludes by issuing some strong policy recommendations and offering an evaluation of what does and does not work in improving educational attainment The recommendations address such issues as school effectiveness education financing individual investment in education government education initiatives higher education labor market rewards and lifelong learning The Economics of Education Daniele

Checchi, 2008-06-19 In an important contribution to educational policy Daniele Checchi offers an economic perspective on the demand and supply of education. He explores the reasons why beyond a certain point investment in education has not resulted in reductions in social inequalities. Starting with the seminal work of Gary Becker, Checchi provides an extensive survey of the literature on human capital and social capital formation. He draws on individual data on intergenerational transmission of income and education for the USA, Germany and Italy as well as aggregate data on income and educational inequality for a much wider range of countries.
