find strategies and ways to respond to these international challenges to play a more active role in addressing social issues and to take responsibility for their actions in developing countries. It is the task of public relations practitioners to balance these societal demands and stakeholders' expectations with the goals of their company and to communicate in an effective manner by developing socially responsible strategies. The effectiveness of strategies and communication programs depends on how public relations practitioners communicate with their stakeholders and on how much effort they make to build and maintain good relationships. To guarantee good relations and effective campaigns, the public relations function must be involved in the overall strategic management process where public relations strategies can be managed by objectives. Furthermore, public relations practitioners have to employ two-way symmetrical communication to facilitate mutual understanding and relationship building between their corporation and its stakeholders. Corporations can react to societal demands by using corporate social responsibility (CSR) as a public relations strategy. CSR can be considered either as an opportunity to improve a corporation's image and financial success or as a response to arising conflicts and crises. Both strategic approaches are discussed in this study as, in practice, corporations respond to issues proactively but also have to deal with crises reactively. Today, many corporations use CSR proactively as they are aware of its various positive outcomes and valuable contributions for both society and its business success. Corporations can act with altruistic or self-interested motives but whichever motivation establishes the basis for CSR, both require the employment of issues management, a strategic planning process that analyses the impact of societal issues and gives corporations the chance to invest effectively and proactively. Corporations can contribute to societal demands in three ways: first by making cash and in-kind donations to public charities; secondly, they can support
